BANK BANDIT SLAIN IN MARLBORO LONGWORTH'S BURIAL IN CINCINNATI

FUNERAL TRAIN TO LEAVE AIKEN FOR OHIO TODAY

Rites for House Speaker, Who Died Yesterday, Set Tomorrow.

PNEUMONIA IS FATAL AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Wife at Bedside as Death Comes; Her Brothers Arrive Later.

HOOVER, OFFICIALS TO ATTEND SERVICES

Delegations of Associates in Congress to Be Present; Nation Mourns.

Aiken, S. C., April 9 (A.P.).—Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the National House and one of the most fascinating figures in American statesmanship, died of pneumonia today.

The 61-year-old representative fought a valiant battle aided by Mrs. Longworth—"Princess Alice" to millions—but succumbed at 10:49 a. m.

The end came in a Southern springtime at the Colonial home of James Curtis after a three-day siege of the disease.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m., (C. S. T.), Saturday, at Christ Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, where his body will be taken direct from Aiken. There will be no state funeral. Mrs. Longworth expressed her desire that there be simplicity in the burial arrangements.

Wife Was at Bedside.

His wife was with him when death came. She reached his bedside early Wednesday after it had been learned his condition was serious. After Mr. Longworth's death she denied herself to visitors.

Her brothers, Archibald and Kermit Roosevelt, hurrying here by plane, failed to reach their brother-in-law's bedside before he died.

Government officials, including President Hoover, have announced their intention of attending the funeral services. The President was expected to take a special train from Washington to pay tribute to one of the outstanding Republican leaders.

The body is to be placed on a train in Aiken tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. and routed direct to the Ohio city through Columbia, Spartanburg and Asheville, via the Southern Railway, reaching there Saturday at 7 a. m.

Born in Cincinnati.

Mr. Longworth was born in Cincinnati in 1869, and overcame the obstacle of wealth to reach a position of power in political circles.

For several years, after finishing his work in Congress, he has been coming to Aiken to recuperate. This year he made another visit to the Curtis home, but soon after reaching

Calvin Coolidge Says: We can not make any proper estimate of the present or the future without taking into consideration the natural and unconquerable impulse of human nature to improve, produce and progress. Left to itself it will find a way.

A reliable publication recently stated that last year over 600 new tools were perfected to make the labor of man more effective and more expeditious. The record of new corporations organized in the State of New York for the March quarter was over 6,500. That was 31 more than for the corresponding period in the previous year. A survey of industrial conditions about the metropolitan area of New York City discloses that four years ago there were 34,000 manufacturing plants with an average of 29 employes.

These accomplishments are not the result of huge aggregations of capital and great engineering skill—they represent the inherent creative energy and ingenuity of the people. This is apparent in every workshop and on every farm in the land. That is the spirit of life. Nowhere has it been so predominant as in the United States. It is a guarantee for the future.

FLAGS ARE LOWERED AS CAPITAL GRIEVES

Associates of Speaker to Travel to Cincinnati, as Will President.

(Associated Press.)

Heads were bowed in the Capital yesterday at the passing of Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, a representative who had won esteem for himself before he attained the Speaker's chair.

Officials and private citizens, from President Hoover down, paid tribute to the man. Many of them planned to journey to Cincinnati to join the President in paying final homage at the funeral.

Flags by executive order swung at half-staff atop the White House, the Capitol and the broad-fronted public buildings.

Immediately after learning of Mr. Longworth's death President Hoover dispatched his military aid, Col. Campbell B. Hodges, to Aiken to aid Mrs. Longworth in every way possible.

Later he issued an executive order that the flags upon all Government buildings be lowered to half-staff and announced he would travel to Cincinnati on Saturday for the funeral.

Working at the bidding of Mrs. Longworth, employes who had been associated for years with the Speaker moved sadly about the business of making the necessary arrangements. Throughout the day they had been intermittently in communication with her by telephone from Aiken.

Sergeant-at-Arms Rodgers of the House was in the room when Miss Mildred Reeves, the Speaker's secretary, learned of his death.

When word came that the body would be taken direct to Cincinnati from Aiken, Rodgers set about making the necessary arrangements for trains. Miss Reeves will go to Cincinnati in advance of its arrival to aid in preparations there.

Just off the room in which they worked over arrangements for the funeral, the Speaker's private office stood empty. A vacant chair gaped openly from behind a broad mahogany desk. Overlooking them was the elaborately trimmed crystal chandelier under which he had stood at

REPUBLICANS SEEK LONGWORTH'S SEAT

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Ohio will send a Republican to the House to take the place of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, it was predicted last night by those who are familiar with political sentiment in the first district of the Buckeye State.

Nevertheless, it was generally conceded that the death of the beloved Longworth has increased the chances of the Democrats electing the Speaker of the House in December.

Even the two men who are the outstanding Republican aspirants for the speakership—Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, and Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York—have said that Longworth was the only man capable of bringing the various party factions together in the next Congress.

The few House members who were in Washington last night were agreed that the logical Republican choice for the speakership was Representative Tilson, who has been his party's floor leader for the last ten years.

That there will be a fight against Mr. Tilson, however, seems certain. Among others likely to be put forward for the post are Will Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the appropriations committee; Willis C. Hawley, of Oregon, chairman of the ways and means committee; James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania; Carl E. Mapes and Earl C. Michener, of Michigan, and William Ramseyer, of Iowa.

The Democratic choice for speaker undoubtedly will be Representative John H. Garner, of Texas, the scrappy floor leader of the Democrats.

After the ballots had been counted in the November election, the political line-up in the House was as follows: Republicans, 218 Democrats, 216, and Farmer-Labor, 1.

Right now there are two vacancies, not counting the one created by the death of Speaker Longworth. These were caused by the passing of two veterans—Representative Henry Allen

FOUR WITNESS SUICIDAL LEAP OFF TAFT SPAN

Man Pens Note Telling of Worries and Takes Death Plunge.

BODY IS RECOVERED ON ROADWAY BELOW

Victim Only Recently Was Dismissed From Naval Hospital Here.

After penning a note in which he expressed weariness with life, Charles S. Denton, 38-year-old war veteran, stood on the west railing of the William Howard Taft Bridge at sunset yesterday and leaped to his death in the chasm below.

Denton, who was discharged as a patient at the United States Naval Hospital three weeks ago, since had been living at boarding houses here. He paid his bill and moved from the last of these Wednesday. Police do not know where he passed the night. Only 60 cents was found in his pockets.

"I am taking what perhaps a great many persons will say is the coward's way out," read a note found on his lifeless body recovered by police in the roadway below.

"Life for me is no longer worth the struggle. What could be more logical for an elimination for all time than an adventure into space. Finis. I am, Charles S. Denton."

The note was addressed, "To whom it may concern." A postscript requested that police communicate with a Capt. White, of the Veterans Bureau, who was to be reminded of something Denton wanted him to do.

Fourth Leap Recently.

Before he made the jump, the fourth from the old "Million-Dollar Bridge" in a few weeks, Denton telephoned his former landlady, Mrs. A. B. Steward, of 1106 Thirteenth street northwest, and requested that is anything happened to him she notify Miss Betty Wesley, of Richmond, Va.

Miss Worley told a Post reporter by long distance telephone that she knew Denton only by corresponding with him while he was a patient at the United States Naval Hospital. She said she last heard from him Easter Sunday, when he wired her he would be in Lynchburg Monday or Tuesday, and expected to see her.

Miss Worley said she had never seen Denton, although she had his pictures, and from the tone of his letters considered him educated and "a refined young gentleman." She said she thought he had relatives in Los Angeles, although he had never given her their names.

Denton has been in the Naval Hospital three months prior to his dismissal March 20. He told attaches at the hospital to notify Miss Elizabeth Good, 1101 North Twenty-second street, Richmond, Va., "a friend," if anything happened to him at the Garrisons in Azores Join in Revolt; Troops Are on Patrol in Lisbon.

Lisbon, Portugal, April 9 (A.P.).—Lisbon was assuming the aspect of an armed camp tonight after it was learned the military rebellion at Funchal, Madeira, had spread to garrisons in the Azores, which have repudiated allegiance to the central government here.

Armored cars with republican guards rumbled through the streets of the capital as infantry and marine companies patrolled the streets. All strategic points in Lisbon were under control of government troops, who had been kept in their barracks throughout the day.

LAW SOUGHT TO BAR PENSIONED WORKERS

Veterans in Federal Offices, Drawing Disability Pay, Face Fight on Jobs.

Congress will be asked to pass on the propriety of Government employes' receiving disability compensation under the emergency officers' retirement law, while drawing full salaries in various important positions in the Government service.

The question will be put to the next session of Congress by Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, which has been a frequent target for criticism, because some of the officers of the bureau are drawing compensation for disability incurred in more or less war service and full salaries for doing their jobs as officials of the bureau.

Gen. Hines has put the question up to Attorney General Mitchell, and a report, containing the Attorney General's opinion as to what is the meaning of the present law, is expected to be given Gen. Hines soon.

Under existing interpretation of the law, persons having had service in the course of the World War, and having been adjudged to have received disabilities in the course of their service, are entitled to compensation and are not to be penalized because they are able to overcome real or supposed handicaps and per-

ABANDONED VEHICLE FOUND ON ROADSIDE

Woman Smiles After Arrest in Room Containing Machine Gun Parts.

Amid a rain of bullets one bandit was slain and his three companions escaped in a thrilling hunt when their daring holdup of the First National Bank of Southern Maryland at Upper Marlboro was frustrated early yesterday afternoon by a nervy assistant cashier at the risk of his life and those of two other employes and a patron.

The dead bandit was identified as Joseph Hayes, alias [illegible] H. Cartright, 30 years old, of Chicago, by a District automobile driving permit in his clothes and by a description substantiated by a woman claiming to be his widow, Mrs. Mary Anne Hayes, 30 years old, who was taken in custody with her 21-month-old baby, in an apartment in Clifton Terrace West.

In the apartment, the number of which was listed on the permit, police reported seizing a quantity of machine gun parts, a sawed-off shotgun, ammunition, a Chicago police car shield, other weapons, and clothing packed in suitcases, they said, indicated that occupants of the apartment had prepared for a hasty departure. They said the apartment, rented by Hayes for the last two weeks, appeared to have been occupied also by several other persons.

Mrs. Hayes, held with her baby at the House of Detention, was questioned at length, but police declined to reveal what they learned.

Thrown Into Excitement.

Upper Marlboro was thrown into a high state of excitement by the fusillade of shots, which was heard for several blocks by a large crowd which had congregated in the historic little town for court sessions and a religious rally. A broadcast immediately went out for the escaping machine. Court was recessed, the numerous county policemen assembled there for trials joined town officers and armed volunteers in a carsvan of posse cars; all Maryland State policemen on duty at the Bowie races were sent into action on adjacent roads, and almost a dozen Washington police cruisers and scout cars combed nearby Maryland and the Anacostia section.

While hundreds were milling outdoors at the bank, facing the Marlboro pike in the heart of the town, a large eight-cylinder sedan swept across the intersection to a stop at the side of the bank. While one man remained at the wheel of the car, its motor still purring, three bandits leaped out, jogged around the corner and through the front door of the building, one of the men clutching a powerful submachine gun which he brazenly disdained to hide.

Two of the men whipped out revolvers and darted through a swinging door to stop at the end of the main counter. At the same moment James W. Latimer, 45 years old, supervisor of the Marlboro postoffice, finished making a deposit at the

Amateurs Writing Ads Doing Splendid Work

Post-Zain $10,000 Contest Drawing Out Undeveloped Talent in Large Number—Everybody Seems to Be Playing the Game.

The Post-Zain Ad Writing Contest, with its prize allure of $10,000 in cash and merchandise, is bringing to light a lot of undeveloped ad writing talent.

And that, of course, is just what we had hoped for. We knew that most any one who reads ads every day could do a pretty good job of writing some of their own. But it took this contest to prove it.

Judging from the letters flowing to the Contest Editor, everybody is having a good time playing the game. For that's what its turned out to be, an exhilarating, stimulating, educational game. And if you are not one of the players, you ought to start right now.

The contest is going to run for seven weeks, you know, and every week there are going to be prizes, lots of them. A cash award of $100, and 175 individual merchandise awards, will be made weekly. And, as we have told you before, $1,000 will be paid to the grand prize winner at the close of the seven weeks.

One of the attractive features, to those who have aspired to be professional ad writers, will be the appearance of the winning ads in type at the close of each weekly period.

Again we want to remind contestants that amateur ads about any or all of the 35 advertisers cooperating in the contest may be submitted for the first week's prizes up to midnight Wednesday. The following day professional advertising men making up our board of judges will meet to select the winners. And the Friday following, the winners will be announced. You should be among them. Ads received after the first weekly period will be considered, of course, in the second week, and so on until the contest closes.

It is important that you write each ad on a separate piece of paper. Put the name of the concern you are ad-

"Princess Alice" Romance Helps Widow Bear Blow

Courage of Col. Roosevelt's Daughter Carries Her Through Ordeal; Friends Do Not Expect Her to Enter Politics.

(Associated Press.)

Alice Roosevelt Longworth bore the blow of sudden widowhood yesterday with the stamina and courage for which she has been noted since she lived in the White House.

"She is keeping up wonderfully," said a close friend who received directions here for the funeral which will close a romance that began with an international political mission more than a quarter-century ago.

It was "Princess Alice" who took charge of the arrangements. She decided against a State funeral. She talked to the office staff three times by telephone, and each time they were impressed with her fortitude.

When Mrs. Longworth left for Aiken, S. C., she knew her husband had pneumonia. Those who saw her transacting business matters before leaving said there were blue shadowed hollows in her cheeks. But she told them not to worry, and to keep the news from friends "because it would soon pass over."

If she comes back to Washington, as her friends are confident she will, "Princess Alice" will begin a new phase. But still important will be her role as a national character.

Those who know Mrs. Longworth intimately do not expect her to follow the example of other widows of public men, and become a candidate for public office. She does not like doing the usual. Her interest in

Many Husbands and Wives Entering Bridge Tourney

Entries Expose Fallacy of Theory That Game Is Hazardous to Domestic Peace; Books Are in Great Demand.

Entries already made in the first annual bridge tournament of Washington players has exploded one popular fallacy with respect to the game, namely, the danger of family bridge.

The extent to which husbands and wives are entering the contest with the intention of playing as partners, serves to show that in many homes domestic relations are maintained on an amicable basis even when Mr. and Mrs. sit opposite each other at the bridge table. Playing together gives them a knowledge of the strong and weak points of each, enables them to understand each others bids and provides a system of cooperation that is generally effective against their adversaries who have not had the same advantage of partnership.

One woman correspondent declares that she has found the secret of being an interesting wife and keeping her husband at home when he might otherwise be away without her, and that is by becoming a good bridge player. The number of husband and wife entries would indicate that other women have discovered the same secret.

Of course, a classic example of family bridge is the success which has been attained by Ely Culbertson and Mrs. Culbertson, who are members of the American team that won

ANNAPOLIS RESIDENT ARRESTED ON CHARGE

Traffic Policeman Suffers Fractured Knee When Motorcycle Crashes.

Three men were injured, one seriously, in a collision of two automobiles yesterday at Seventeenth and M streets northwest, said to have been caused by the obscuration of a stop sign by a parked automobile.

Everett Robey, 23 years old, a passenger in one of the machines, is in Emergency Hospital where he is said to be injured internally. His condition is thought to be serious.

Others injured in the accident were George W. Trevener, 51 years old, of 1428 Taylor street driver of one automobile, and Ernest Jackson, 31 years old, driver of the machine in which Robey was riding. They were treated for bruises.

Annapolis Man Arrested.

George C. Fowler, 40 years old, of Annapolis, Md., owner of the parked automobile, was arrested by Third Precinct police for parking within 25 feet of a stop sign. He was released on $5 collateral.

Police say the accident occurred when the car driven by Trevener, going west on M street, crashed into one going north on Seventeenth street, piling both cars into a tree. Trevener said he could not see the stop sign because of a parked automobile which, police said, is owned by Fowler.

Jackson, Robey and Dorothy Hall, passengers in one of the cars, are employed at Harmony Hall, the home of Charles W. Collins, at Broad Creek, in southern Maryland.

Two Not Injured.

Walter Baddy, of 524 Tenth street northeast, and Harvey Gordon, 1925 Twelfth street northwest, passengers in the Trevenor car, were not injured.

Policeman Marvin N. Carpenter, of the Traffic Bureau, suffered a fractured knee yesterday when his motorcycle and an automobile driven by Jessie C. Davis, of Ballston, Va., collided at Florida avenue and L street northeast. Davis was charged with reckless driving.

The automobile was making a left turn into L street when the crash occurred, Carpenter was following a funeral at the time. He was removed to Emergency Hospital, where he was found to have, besides the broken knee, contusions of the hip and lacerations of the hands.

Boy Seriously Hurt.

Two Negroes were injured yesterday when their automobile was in collision at Fifth and M streets northeast with another driven by James A. Moore, 31, of M street near Eighteenth street northeast. Liam Barbour, 41, suffered a fracture of the pelvis and William Greene, his 13-year-old companion, received a possible skull fracture, concussion of the brain and lacerations of the scalp.

Barbour, who lives on L street near First northwest, was taken to Freedmen's Hospital in a passing machine. Greene is in Casualty Hospital in a serious condition. He lives at 97 Fenton street northeast.

Pauline Paul, 9, was struck by a taxicab yesterday near her home at 623 Fourth street northwest, suffering cuts, bruises and a slight concussion of the brain. Virginia City Considers Natural Gas Proposal

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 8.—A possibility that Charlottesville may join a half dozen other towns in the State in the use of natural gas, to be taken from a line running from eastern Kentucky to Washington and Baltimore, was indicated at a meeting of the city council when Mayor Fred L. Watson read a letter from the Ohio Fuel & Gas Co., asking permission to make an estimate on the city's gas properties with the view of purchasing them.

The commissioners gave permission for the appraisal. Mayor Watson, City Manager H. A. Yancey and City Attorney E. V. Walker were asked to draw up a reply to the letter.

Indictments Cite Thomas in Fraud

Former Attorney for U. S. Veterans' Bureau in Richmond Accused.

Richmond, Va., April 8 (A.P.).—Robert Thomas, former regional attorney for the United States Veterans Bureau, who on Monday was awarded $10,500 damages from officials of the Veterans Bureau for slander and conspiracy, was named in several indictments returned in United States District Court here today in connection with veterans' affairs.

P. A. L. Smith, jr., Commonwealth's attorney of Goochland County, who has pending a $50,000 slander suit against the same Veterans Bureau officials named by Thomas, also was indicted.

Two of the bills returned charge Thomas with fraud in connection with settlement of the war risk insurance of James Allen, a deceased war veteran. In another he is named jointly with the Rev. B. J. Hill and Alice White, of Petersburg, for having conspired to violate the war risk insurance law, and in still another, Thomas, Smith and Paul S. Williams are charged with conspiring to prevent Veterans Bureau officials—the same ones named in the Thomas and Smith slander suits—for discharging the duties of their offices by means of "force, intimidation, threat and assault."

TWO SAFES BLOWN; LOOT TOTALS $150

Filling Stations Are Robbed at Charlottesville, During Night.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 8.—Yeggmen early tonight blew open the safes in two filling stations on Rose Hill, one owned by the Texas Co. and the other by the Rubin Lowe Co., but got less than $150.

The safe at the Texas station was completely shattered, and the money drawer, containing $143 was taken away. At the Rubin Lowe station a small safe was blown open, but the robbers failed to gain entrance to a larger safe, after breaking off the combination.

Both places were visited soon after nightfall, less than an hour after they had been closed for the day.

The explosions were not heard in the neighborhood. Discovery of the robbery at the Texas plant was made by the manager who returned at 8:30 p. m. to do some office work.

Monday night burglers entered the dry goods store of Hawkins Brothers & Co., on Main street, and carried off goods valued at $600. Entrance was gained by a rope ladder swung from a skylight. A two-day search by city police has failed to reveal any trace of the robbers.

Two Are Cleared In Virginia Killing

Jurors Refuse to Indict Men After Shooting Over Dog.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., April 8.—A grand jury today refused to indict Constable George Bageant and George W. Pingley, special deputy, for murder in the killing of Mrs. Rebecca Orndorff, wife of Blanton Orndorff, last November.

Members of a former grand jury, which had also refused to indict Orndorff and his three sons for the same offense, were among many witnesses examined. Mrs. Orndorff was killed with a shotgun during a fight at the Orndorff home, where officers had gone to obtain possession of a dog held by court order to belong to Chester Hockman, who accompanied them. Two grand juries were unable to determine who held the gun when it was fired.

The exercises will begin in the morning with a Founder's Day celebration at the nearby University of Virginia which Thomas Jefferson founded and the buildings of which he designed and had built under his personal supervision. ALEXANDRIA'S TAXES MAY NOT FEEL RULE

City Attorney, However, to Get Lynchburg Case Data at Richmond.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

According to an informal opinion of City Attorney Carl Budwesky, the decision recently handed down by the State Court of Appeals in the Lynchburg tax case will not have any bearing on the blanket cut made by the local board of tax equalization last December, when the new assessment was cut in half, due to the fact that all real property except that of incorporations was assessed at its full market value. Mr. Budwesky stated, however that he has not had opportunity to make a thorough study of the tax decision, but expects to be in Richmond today, when he will obtain a report of the decision in the Lynchburg case.

The local tax assessors in rendering their report last December placed an assessment of the full market value on all real property owned by individuals, this property having heretofore been assessed at approximately one-third its value. It appeared, however, that real estate owned by public utilities and other corporations was assessed by the State Corporation Commission at a considerably lower figure, and the city was faced with the choice of fixing a tax rate which would place a greater burdend on the private owner than on the corporation or of making the rate so low that the return in taxes would not meet the city's financial requirements. The rate which had been proposed was $1.20 on each $100 valuation, but the board of tax equalization decided to make a blanket cut of one-half in the assessment, and the city accordingly fixed the tax rate at $2.40.

It now appears that should the decision in the Lynchburg case be applied to Alexandria it would mean that Alexandrians would be compelled to pay the $2.40 rate on the full market value of their property, or double the rate which now obtains.

The rate in effect prior to the new assessment was $1.65 on the $100, and the $2.40 rate, which yields slightly more revenue than the old rate, and was adopted by the city council after careful study of financial needs.

An important difference between the situation in Alexandria and that in Lynchburg appears to be that the Alexandria property was assessed at its full market value and the assessment was cut in half before the tax rate was fixed, whereas in Lynchburg the property was not assessed at its fil value, and the assessment was cut 20 per cent.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

IF CHARLIE CHAPLIN KEEPS A DIARY.

MONDAY: Arrived at Southampton. King George and Queen Mary rowed out to meet me in the queen's own imperial dinghy. Offered to turn over Buckingham Palace to me for the season. Ramsay MacDonald took me to lunch. Went bicycle riding with Stanley Baldwin and Lloyd George in afternoon. Am being followed everywhere by George Bernard Shaw. Understand he wants to adopt me. Guest of royalty at dinner. The king offered to vacate and give me the crown. I promised him I would think it over.

Wednesday: Taken to France on British warship. France has declared a National Charlie Chaplin Week. Quite a cabinet crisis developed over the honor of entertaining me. Received formal notification from the premier that I had been allotted a place in the tomb of Napoleon. These French are so considerate. Committee waited on me to get my consent to change the name of the Arch de Triomphe to the Chaplin Arch.

• • • •

Friday: Arrived in Germany. Met at the border by Von Hindenberg, who carried me from there to Berlin on his shoulder. All Germany is decorated in my honor. Got a charming cable of affection from former Kaiser Wilhelm. Hitler threw a party for me in the evening. Ludendorf wants me for tea tomorrow. I understand there is a movement afoot to restore the monarchy and make me Kaiser Charlie.

• • • •

Sunday: My visit to Austria has given the people the first real happiness since the prewar days. Am weak from festivities.

• • • •

TUESDAY: Mussolini has sent word that if I don't come to Italy at once he will feel very hurt. The people are crying for me.

• • • •

Wednesday: Mussolini in person met me at Milan and drove me to Rome in his own car. We hit no children. The king and Benito had quite a row over which should throw a dinner party for me. It looked like war for a time. I finally avoided trouble by taking dinner with Benito and going to the theater with the king and queen. They want to give me the Island of Capri to remember them by.

• • • •

Friday: Flew to Spain. There was a revolution on but it was stopped as soon as the people spotted me. Mass meetings are being held everywhere at which it is advocated that Alfonso be deposed and that I take the throne. It's all quite jolly.

• • • •

Sunday: Had a wire from Sweden. The King says that if I will favor the country with a visit he will recall the Nobel prize given to Sinclair Lewis and present it to me.

A SUGGESTION.

If those radio piano lesson hours are to have a theme song how about a number called "Fearful Little Earful?"

A pin dropped at a broadcasting studio the other day made a crash that was heard 'round the world. Ima Dodo, whose radio hasn't been working very well lately, thinks somebody at the stations she tunes into has been dropping railroad spikes.

MAYBE HE ONLY LOOKS THAT WAY GOING INTO HIS BACKSWING.

Doak to Be One of Principal Speakers at Event in Arlington County.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 809. Clarendon, Va.

William N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, and Oliver Owen Kuhn, of Washington, will be principal speakers at the annual banquet to be given this evening at 6:45 o'clock by the Arlington County Civic Federation at the Army-Navy Club in Arlington County. Among other guests will be Representative Judge Howard W. Smith and former Representative R. Walton Moore.

Harry A. Fellows, president of the federation, will act as the toastmaster and deliver the address of welcome. The invocation will be by the Rev. Elmer Lucas, pastor of the Cherrydale United Baptist Church.

The program will include solos by Jesse Veitch, radio artist of Washington, and George Leich, soloist of Grace Episcopal Church, Alexandria, and readings by Mrs. Elsie Gordon, of Arlington County. Both soloists will be accompanied by Miss Gladys George.

Following the banquet and program there will be a reception, with officers of the federation and guests of honor in the receiving line. The reception will be followed by dancing.

Letters were mailed yesterday by Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, to prominent citizens and businessmen throughout the county, asking assistance in raising the necessary funds for the erection of the proposed memorial to World War dead in the circle in the center of Clarendon Square.

According to George D. Ricker, commander of the post, it is the hope of the organization that the monument can be financed through small contributions, so that every resident of the county will have an interest in the project.

The county board of supervisors has authorized erection of the memorial and the legion post has been awaiting more favorable working conditions before starting the drive for funds. It is expected $500 will be needed.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Circuit Court of Arlington County, last night announced that he will hear the arguments of attorneys on the cross bill to the injunction granted Virginia M. VanEvery prohibiting the State Highway Department from constructing the Lee boulevard across her property in Arlington County. The hearing is set for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in Arlington County Courthouse.

Testimony was taken on the cross bill last Saturday. The principal contention of Mrs. VanEvery will be that the alleged option on which the State claims a right to the property violates the rule against perpetuities, inasmuch as it was not certain when the right of option could be exercised. Decisions cited by attorneys for the plaintiff held that the option must be fixed for a certain day within 21 years from the time it was entered into.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Glencarlyn School will meet in the school auditorium tonight at 8 o'clock.

Officers of the Stonewall Jackson School at Bon Air and the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston will attend.

The Lyon Park Community Center, which comprises the Citizens Association and the Woman's Club, announces that plans are under way for an indoor carnival to be held in the community house, April 30 to May 2, inclusive.

Crekmore, Arthur Orr and N. B. Medley.

The committee for the woman's club will be announced at a later date.

BANK BANDIT SLAIN IN MARLBORO
LONGWORTH'S BURIAL IN CINCINNATI

Rites for House Speaker, Who Died Yesterday, Set Tomorrow.

Wife at Bedside as Death Comes; Her Brothers Arrive Later.

HOOVER, OFFICIALS TO ATTEND SERVICES

Delegations of Associates in Congress to Be Present; Nation Mourns.

Aiken, S. C., April 9 (A.P.).—Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the National House and one of the most fascinating figures in American statesmanship, died of pneumonia today.

The 61-year-old representative fought a valiant battle aided by Mrs. Longworth—"Princess Alice" to millions—but succumbed at 10:49 a. m.

The end came in a Southern springtime at the Colonial home of James Curtis after a three-day siege of illness.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m., (C. S. T.), Saturday, at Christ Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, where his body will be taken direct from Aiken. There will be no state funeral. Mrs. Longworth expressed her desire that there be simplicity in the burial arrangements.

Wife Was at Bedside.

His wife was with him when death came. She reached his bedside early Wednesday after it had been learned his condition was serious. After Mr. Longworth's death she denied herself to visitors.

Her brothers, Archibald and Kermit Roosevelt, hurrying here by plane, failed to reach their brother-in-law's bedside before he died.

Government officials, including President Hoover, have announced their intention of attending the funeral services. The President was expected to take a special train from Washington to pay tribute to one of the outstanding Republican leaders.

The body is to be placed on a train in Aiken tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. and routed direct to the Ohio city through Columbia, Spartanburg and Asheville, via the Southern Railway, reaching there Saturday at 7 a. m.

Born in Cincinnati.

Mr. Longworth was born in Cincinnati in 1869, and overcame the obstacle of wealth to reach a position of power in political circles.

For several years, after finishing his work in Congress, he has been coming to Aiken to recuperate. This year he made another visit to the Curtis home, but soon after reaching

Calvin Coolidge Says: We can not make any proper estimate of the present or the future without taking into consideration the natural and unconquerable impulse of human nature to improve, produce and progress. Left to itself it will find a way.

A reliable publication recently stated that last year over 600 new tools were perfected to make the labor of man more effective and more expeditious. The record of new corporations organized in the State of New York for the March quarter was over 6,500. That was 31 more than for the corresponding period in the previous year. A survey of industrial conditions about the metropolitan area of New York City discloses that four years ago there were 34,000 manufacturing plants with an average of 29 employes.

These accomplishments are not the result of huge aggregations of capital and great engineering skill—they represent the inherent creative energy and ingenuity of the people. This is apparent in every workshop and on every farm in the land. That is the spirit of life. Nowhere has it been so predominant as in the United States. It is a guarantee for the future.

FLAGS ARE LOWERED AS CAPITAL GRIEVES

Associates of Speaker to Travel to Cincinnati, as Will President.

(Associated Press.)

Heads were bowed in the Capital yesterday at the passing of Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, a representative who had won esteem for himself before he attained the Speaker's chair.

Officials and private citizens, from President Hoover down, paid tribute to the man. Many of them planned to journey to Cincinnati to join the President in paying final homage at the funeral.

Flags by executive order swung at half-staff atop the White House, the Capitol and the broad-fronted public buildings.

Immediately after learning of Mr. Longworth's death President Hoover dispatched his military aid, Col. Campbell B. Hodges, to Aiken to aid Mrs. Longworth in every way possible.

Later he issued an executive order that the flags upon all Government buildings be lowered to half-staff and announced he would travel to Cincinnati on Saturday for the funeral.

Working at the bidding of Mrs. Longworth, employes who had been associated for years with the Speaker moved sadly about the business of making the necessary arrangements. Throughout the day they had been intermittently in communication with her by telephone from Aiken.

Sergeant-at-Arms Rodgers of the House was in the room when Miss Mildred Reeves, the Speaker's secretary, learned of his death.

When word came that the body would be taken direct to Cincinnati from Aiken, Rodgers set about making the necessary arrangements for trains. Miss Reeves will go to Cincinnati in advance of its arrival to aid in preparations there.

Just off the room in which they worked over arrangements for the funeral, the Speaker's private office stood empty. A vacant chair gaped openly from behind a broad mahogany desk. Overlooking them was the elaborately trimmed crystal chandelier under which he had stood at

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Ohio will send a Republican to the House to take the place of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, it was predicted last night by those who are familiar with political sentiment in the first district of the Buckeye State.

Nevertheless, it was generally conceded that the death of the beloved Longworth has increased the chances of the Democrats electing the Speaker of the House in December.

Even the two men who are the outstanding Republican aspirants for the speakership—Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, and Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York—have said that Longworth was the only man capable of bringing the various party factions together in the next Congress.

The few House members who were in Washington last night were agreed that the logical Republican choice for the speakership was Representative Tilson, who has been his party's floor leader for the last ten years.

That there will be a fight against Mr. Tilson, however, seems certain. Among others likely to be put forward for the post are Will Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the appropriations committee; Willis C. Hawley, of Oregon, chairman of the ways and means committee; James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania; Carl E. Mapes and Earl C. Michener, of Michigan, and William Ramseyer, of Iowa.

The Democratic choice for speaker undoubtedly will be Representative John H. Garner, of Texas, the scrappy floor leader of the Democrats.

After the ballots had been counted in the November election, the political line-up in the House was as follows: Republicans, 218 Democrats, 216, and Farmer-Labor, 1.

Right now there are two vacancies, not counting the one created by the death of Speaker Longworth. These were caused by the passing of two veterans—Representative Henry Allen

FOUR WITNESS SUICIDAL LEAP OFF TAFT SPAN

BODY IS RECOVERED ON ROADWAY BELOW

Victim Only Recently Was Dismissed From Naval Hospital Here.

After penning a note in which he expressed weariness with life, Charles S. Denton, 38-year-old war veteran, stood on the west railing of the William Howard Taft Bridge at sunset yesterday and leaped to his death in the chasm below.

Denton, who was discharged as a patient at the United States Naval Hospital three weeks ago, since had been living at boarding houses here. He paid his bill and moved from the last of these Wednesday. Police do not know where he passed the night. Only 69 cents was found in his pockets.

"I am taking what perhaps a great many persons will say is the coward's way out," read a note found on his lifeless body recovered by police in the roadway below.

"Life for me is no longer worth the struggle. What could be more logical for an elimination for all time than an adventure into space. Finis. I am, Charles S. Denton."

The note was addressed, "To whom it may concern." A postscript requested that police communicate with a Capt. White, of the Veterans Bureau, who was to be reminded of something Denton wanted him to do.

Fourth Leap Recently.

Before he made the jump, the fourth from the old "Million-Dollar Bridge" in a few weeks, Denton telephoned his former landlady, Mrs. A. B. Steward, of 1108 Thirteenth street northwest, and requested that is anything happened to him she notify Miss Betty Wesley, of Richmond, Va.

Miss Worley told a Post reporter by long distance telephone that she knew Denton only by corresponding with him while he was a patient at the United States Naval Hospital. She said she last heard from him Easter Sunday, when he wired her he would be in Lynchburg Monday or Tuesday, and expected to see her.

Miss Worley said she had never seen Denton, although she had his pictures, and from the tone of his letters considered him educated and "a refined young gentleman." She said she thought he had relatives in Los Angeles, although he had never given her their names.

Denton has been in the Naval Hospital three months prior to his dismissal March 20. He told attaches at the hospital to notify Miss Elizabeth Good, 1101 North Twenty-second street, Richmond, Va., "a friend," if anything happened to him at the Lisbon, Portugal, April 9 (A.P.).—Lisbon was assuming the aspect of an armed camp tonight after it was learned the military rebellion at Funchal, Madeira, had spread to garrisons in the Azores, which have repudiated allegiance to the central government here.

Armored cars with republican guards rumbled through the streets of the capital as infantry and marine companies patrolled the streets. All strategic points in Lisbon were under control of government troops, who had been kept in their barracks throughout the day.

LAW SOUGHT TO BAR PENSIONED WORKERS

Veterans in Federal Offices, Drawing Disability Pay, Face Fight on Jobs.

Congress will be asked to pass on the propriety of Government employes' receiving disability compensation under the emergency officers' retirement law, while drawing full salaries in various important positions in the Government service.

The question will be put to the next session of Congress by Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, which has been a frequent target for criticism, because some of the officers of the bureau are drawing compensation for disability incurred in more or less war service and full salaries for doing their jobs as officials of the bureau.

Gen. Hines has put the question up to Attorney General Mitchell, and a report, containing the Attorney General's opinion as to what is the meaning of the present law, is expected to be given Gen. Hines soon.

Under existing interpretation of the law, persons having had service in the course of the World War, and having been adjudged to have received disabilities in the course of their service, are entitled to compensation and are not to be penalized because they are able to overcome real or supposed handicaps and per-

ABANDONED VEHICLE FOUND ON ROADSIDE

Woman Smiles After Arrest in Room Containing Machine Gun Parts.

Amid a rain of bullets one bandit was slain and his three companions escaped in a thrilling hunt when their daring holdup of the First National Bank of Southern Maryland at Upper Marlboro was frustrated early yesterday afternoon by a nervy assistant cashier at the risk of his life and those of two other employes and a patron.

The dead bandit was identified as Joseph Hayes [illegible] Tracy H. Cartright, 30 years old, of Chicago, by a District automobile driving permit in his clothes and by a description substantiated by a woman claiming to be his widow, Mrs. Mary Anne Hayes, 30 years old, who was taken in custody with her 21-month-old baby, in an apartment in Clifton Terrace West.

In the apartment, the number of which was listed on the permit, police reported seizing a quantity of machine gun parts, a sawed-off shotgun, ammunition, a Chicago police car shield, other weapons, and clothing packed in suitcases, they said, indicated that occupants of the apartment had prepared for a hasty departure. They said the apartment, rented by Hayes for the last two weeks, appeared to have been occupied also by several other persons.

Mrs. Hayes, held with her baby at the House of Detention, was questioned at length, but police declined to reveal what they learned.

Thrown Into Excitement.

Upper Marlboro was thrown into a high state of excitement by the fusillade of shots, which was heard for several blocks by a large crowd which had congregated in the historic little town for court sessions and a religious rally. A broadcast immediately went out for the escaping machine. Court was recessed, the numerous county policemen assembled there for trials joined town officers and armed volunteers in a caravan of posse cars; all Maryland State policemen on duty at the Bowie races were sent into action on adjacent roads, and almost a dozen Washington police cruisers and scout cars combed nearby Maryland and the Anacostia section.

While hundreds were milling outdoors at the bank, facing the Marlboro pike in the heart of the town, a large eight-cylinder sedan swept across the intersection to a stop at the side of the bank. While one man remained at the wheel of the car, its motor still purring, three bandits leaped out, jogged around the corner and through the front door of the building, one of the men clutching a powerful submachine gun which he brazenly disdained to hide.

Two of the men whipped out revolvers and darted through a swinging door to stop at the end of the main counter. At the same moment James W. Latimer, 45 years old, supervisor of the Marlboro postoffice, finished making a deposit at the

Amateurs Writing Ads Doing Splendid Work

Post-Zain $10,000 Contest Drawing Out Undeveloped Talent in Large Number—Everybody Seems to Be Playing the Game.

The Post-Zain Ad Writing Contest, with its prize allure of $10,000 in cash and merchandise, is bringing to light a lot of undeveloped ad writing talent.

And that, of course, is just what we had hoped for. We knew that most any one who reads ads every day could do a pretty good job of writing some of their own. But it took this contest to prove it.

Judging from the letters flowing to the Contest Editor, everybody is having a good time playing the game. For that's what it's turned out to be, an exhilarating, stimulating, educational game. And if you are not one of the players, you ought to start right now.

The contest is going to run for seven weeks, you know, and every week there are going to be prizes, lots of them. A cash award of $100, and 175 individual merchandise awards, will be made weekly. And, as we have told you before, $1,000 will be paid to the grand prize winner at the close of the seven weeks.

One of the attractive features, to those who have aspired to be professional ad writers, will be the appearance of the winning ads in type at the close of each weekly period.

Again we want to remind contestants that amateur ads about any or all of the 35 advertisers cooperating in the contest may be submitted for the first week's prizes up to midnight Wednesday. The following day professional advertising men making up our board of judges will meet to select the winners. And the Friday following, the winners will be announced. You should be among them. Ads received after the first weekly period will be considered, of course, in the second week, and so on until the contest closes.

It is important that you write each ad on a separate piece of paper. Put the name of the concern you are ad-

"Princess Alice" Romance Helps Widow Bear Blow

Courage of Col. Roosevelt's Daughter Carries Her Through Ordeal; Friends Do Not Expect Her to Enter Politics.

(Associated Press.)

Alice Roosevelt Longworth bore the blow of sudden widowhood yesterday with the stamina and courage for which she has been noted since she lived in the White House.

"She is keeping up wonderfully," said a close friend who received directions here for the funeral which will close a romance that began with an international political mission more than a quarter-century ago.

It was "Princess Alice" who took charge of the arrangements. She decided against a State funeral. She talked to the office staff three times by telephone, and each time they were impressed with her fortitude.

When Mrs. Longworth left for Aiken, S. C., she knew her husband had pneumonia. Those who saw her transacting business matters before leaving said there were blue shadowed hollows in her cheeks. But she told them not to worry, and to keep the news from friends "because it would soon pass over."

If she comes back to Washington, as her friends are confident she will, "Princess Alice" will begin a new phase. But still important will be her role as a national character.

Those who know Mrs. Longworth intimately do not expect her to follow the example of other widows of public men, and become a candidate for public office. She does not like doing the usual. Her interest in

Many Husbands and Wives Entering Bridge Tourney

Entries Expose Fallacy of Theory That Game Is Hazardous to Domestic Peace; Books Are in Great Demand.

Entries already made in the first annual bridge tournament of Washington players has exploded one popular fallacy with respect to the game, namely, the danger of family bridge.

The extent to which husbands and wives are entering the contest with the intention of playing as partners, serves to show that in many homes domestic relations are maintained on an amicable basis even when Mr. and Mrs. sit opposite each other at the bridge table. Playing together gives them a knowledge of the strong and weak points of each, enables them to understand each others bids and provides a system of cooperation that is generally effective against their adversaries who have not had the same advantage of partnership.

One woman correspondent declares that she has found the secret of being an interesting wife and keeping her husband at home when he might otherwise be away without her, and that is by becoming a good bridge player. The number of husband and wife entries would indicate that other women have discovered the same secret.

Of course, a classic example of family bridge is the success which has been attained by Ely Culbertson and Mrs. Culbertson, who are members of the American team that won window to Assistant Cashier Claude H. Owens, 43 years old, and turned. As he turned to leave, the bandit with the submachine gun at the door shouted:

"Stick 'em up and stand back."

Mr. Latimer raised his elbow and sought to ward off a blow. A moment later he grappled with the hold-up man, and was knocked to the floor as the two other bandits covered Mr. Owens with their revolvers.

Back of him sat Fred W. Wilson, 58 years old, a clerk, and across the room sat Miss Louise Armstrong, 22 years old, another clerk.

In a flash Mr. Owens grabbed a .38 revolver lying beneath the counter, kept there for just such an eventuality. With only about 12 feet separating them, the bandit fired and missed. Mr. Owens returned the fire and sent five bullets as his assailant advanced. They clinched for a moment, and the bandit finally slumped to the floor, raised up in a dying gesture and fell back motionless.

These five shots and two shots found to have been fired by the bandit, threw the other two robbers into a panic and they fled hastily from the bank, and into the waiting machine.

With one remaining bullet in his pistol, Mr. Owens turned toward the front door. Mistaking Mr. Latimer for a bandit he started to fire when Miss Armstrong recognized the man and grabbed the revolver. Mr. Latimer leaped to his feet, induced Mr. Owens to give him the weapon and rushed outside. There, Russell Padgett, prominent Marlboro automobile dealer, obtained possession of the pistol and ran close to the escaping machine to fire the final bullet.

Keeping to a back road, the fleeing trio sped toward Washington, entering the pike several miles from Marlboro and finally entering the District for a few minutes. Several police broadcasts in rapid succession sent cruisers and scout cars racing to Anacostia and reports were circulated widely that a police machine had exchanged gunfire with the sedan.

Abandoned Sedan Found.

One of the dozen or more machines bearing policemen and volunteers from Marlboro and the nearby counties finally took up the rail at a point in the little town of Meadows, about 4½ miles from the District Line on the Marlboro pike. Posse cars converged there from many directions and sped about 5 miles along a winding dirt road through Browns Corner to an isolated spot on the road, where the sedan was found abandoned in a roadside gulley.

Although officers scoured the immediate countryside in cars and on foot, no trace of the trio could be found. The theory accepted by police was that the men at that point held a rendezvous and were transferred into another machine in which they made their getaway unsuspected. This contention was stressed after reports that a few minutes before he holdup a speedy black roadster, bearing a man and two flashily dressed women, had cruised about Marlboro and had left hastily toward Washington a few moments before the attempted holdup.

Ohio License Plates.

The abandoned machine bore 1931 Ohio license plates, which were found to have been very insecurely bolted on front and back. Inside were found District tags issued last Monday to Hayes, a baby's small nursing bottle, a baby's bright blue helmet, a prison blanket, a gray overcoat, a coffee can of roofing nails, a leather bag containing .38 and .45 caliber revolver shells, and a handwritten set of road instructions charting mileage, turns and even bad spots on several main and circuitous roads between Washington and Upper Marlboro.

In Hayes' clothing police reported finding receipts for the sedan bought in Chicago on December 8, cash totaling $20, a moderately expensive watch, and a Chicago driving permit, aside from his District permit.

Only a partial description of two of the escaping trio was gained. Mr. Latimer said that the man with the submachine gun was of stocky build, about 40 years old, and of swarthy complexion. Mr. Owens described the other robber in the bank as about the same build.

The slain bandit was pronounced dead by Dr. Reverdy Sasscer, who found a bullet in the neck and another in the chest. The body was removed to the Ritchie Brothers funeral home in Ritchie, Md. The man's pistol bore two bullets which had been snapped, but had failed to explode.

Powder Burns on Hand.

Although not hit, Mr. Owens emerged from the fray bearing powder burns on his left hand, indicating that he had been in a tight grapple with the bandit when the man's second shot was fired. The other male clerk, Mr. Wilson, also narrowly escaped death. A bullet was found lodged in the wall about six inches over his head at the seat in which he had viewed the fracas.

Bank officials said that the holdup was the first in the history of Upper Marlboro. They scoffed at the suggestion that they had in their vaults an unusually large amount of money. They produced a bank report made March 25 in which they listed $129,-332.03 as "cash and due from banks," explaining that this item may have led the bandits to believe that most of this was held there. They said that in reality less than $10,000 was in the bank at the time of the holdup.

When Mrs. Hayes was taken to the Eighth Precinct by Privates D. A. Davis and S. Ostenso, who arrested her in the Clifton Terrace first-floor apartment, she was told by Capt. Hugh M. Groves that her husband had been killed. She exhibited no outward sign of emotion at the news and even smiled when she walked from the captain's office.

Refuses to Comment.

Although questioned from many angles by Capt. Groves and headquarters detectives who were in the station house, she refused to comment in any way, or give any information which might lead to the apprehension of the other two bandits. Throughout the questioning she maintained a tight-lipped silence, and would not even nod her head.

She did, however, tell the police that David Harrington Parker, the 15-year-old youth, of Upshur street, near Seventh street northwest, who was nearby when her apartment was raided, had nothing to do with any of the other men. He was released at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, an hour and a half after his arrest.

Mrs. Hayes, according to police, said she was married to Hayes on May 1, 1930, in Waukegan, Ill., giving their names as Neta Ann Plantz and Tracy H. Cartright, both of Chicago.

HOOVER APPROVES OIL STABILIZATION

President and Aids Praise Plan of Ten Principal Producing States.

(Associated Press.)

The administration yesterday approved the efforts at stabilization of the oil industry being made by the ten principal petroleum-producing States.

Both through the Federal Oil Conservation Board, composed of four Cabinet members, and in a conference at the White House the President and his aids commended the program presented by the oil States advisory committee.

This group, headed by Cicero I. Murray, cousin of Gov. Murray of Oklahoma, laid before the conservation board yesterday morning a plan by which it will continue to function as an adviser and guide to both the industry and the States, while the latter are working toward enactment of a compact which will make it possible to limit the production of oil in all fields proportionately.

The aim is to bring supply into relation to demand, reduce steadily the present enormous storage of oil and gasoline above ground, restore prices to a point at which the hundreds of thousands of small wells can continue to exist and, through saving of independent operators from bankruptcy, preserve competitive conditions in the Nation's second largest industry.

P[illegible]s, however, were not mentioned at the session.

The meeting, attended by representatives of virtually every large oil interest, was principally one between the agents of the States and of the Federal Government.

Senate Power Suit Will Be Outlined

Action to Test Right of Legislative Branch to Recall Appointee.

The Senate's suit to oust Chairman Smith of the Power Commission will be outlined today at a conference between members of the judiciary committee and the special counsel employed to prosecute the court action.

The conference will be attended by Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee; Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, who led the contest against Smith, and John W. Davis and Alexander Groesbeck, the special counsel.

Davis, Democratic candidate for President in 1924, and Groesbeck, former Governor of Michigan, will file the court suit which is expected to carry to the Supreme Court the latest of a series of historical constitutional controversies between the legislative and executive branches of the Government.

Lecturer Blames Politics For Many World Evils

Detroit, April 9 (U.P.).—There's hope for the world if politics is taken out of the hands of politicians, says Albert Edward Wiggam, popular lecturer and psychologist. Wiggam, in an address before the Town Hall Club here, declared there are three great possibilities that lie ahead of the world.

"First, that men shall take the instruments of science and destroy civilization. They have tried it many times. Second, that men shall go on through long periods of economic, scientific and political muddling as they are doing now. And third, that men may apply human intelligence to human affairs."

LAW ASKED TO BAR PENSIONED WORKER

form the duties of a Government job for which they shall receive full salary.

Gen. Hines doesn't like the present situation. He believes that a Government employe should receive only one salary from the Government.

Gen. Hines refused yesterday to discuss the merits of the controversy, which has arisen over the fact that Veterans' Bureau officers are receiving large amounts for compensation at the same time they are holding down large salaried jobs as entirely competent to do so.

"My job," Gen. Hines said, "is to comply with the law and administer the Veterans' Bureau under the law laid down by Congress. That is as far as I can go."

William Wolff Smith, who was derisively described on the floor of the House in the course of the last session of Congress as "Poker Bill" Smith, when Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, launched an attack on the situation, has been a shining mark for critics. Mr. Smith is chief counsel of the bureau.

More than 300 employes of the Veterans' Bureau would be affected by any change in the existing interpretation of the law. Some of these receive large salaries.

Strikes at General Service.

Whatever course is followed with regard to employes of the Veterans' Bureau should also be followed in dealing with employes throughout the Government service, bureau officials believe. There are thousands of these, it is estimated.

Just what Gen. Hines will do about the matter will depend on the opinion of Attorney General Mitchell.

If Mr. Mitchell upsets the present interpretation there will follow an immediate application in the course of which bureau employes will either lose their jobs or their disability retirement pay.

Survey Is Expected.

Review of the status of all bureau employes receiving compensation and drawing full salaries is expected to be ordered by Gen. Hines, if the opinion of Attorney General Mitchell opens the door to such a course.

Whatever the opinion of the Attorney General may be along this particular line, however, Gen. Hines is believed to feel that the Veterans' Bureau would be better off if its executive personnel did not include men who are drawing large salaries for Government work and compensation for disability at the same time.

Whether the feeling of Gen. Hines will go so far as to constrain him to make several changes in the personnel of the bureau executives is problematical, but those close to the director are not certain that some changes will not be made.

Hurley, McDuffie Honor Longworth

War Secretary, Democratic Whip Join in Radio Broadcast.

(Associated Press.)

The life of Nicholas Longworht was described last night by Secretary Hurlye as "the story of the success of generosity." The War Department Secretary was joined by Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, Democratic whip, in a eulogy of the former Speaker in a special program broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co.

McDuffie said the "untimely death" of Longworth "marks the passing of one of America's ablest and foremost statesmen, likewise one of the most popular figures who has ever come into the public life of the Nation."

"Since this morning the life of Nicholas Longworth belongs to posterity," Hurley said. "The story of that life is the inspiring story of the work of a nobe character, of kindliness, and of gneerous aspirations. It is the story of the success of generosity. In the long, hard climb to the eminence of affluence and leadership Nicholas Longworth did no mean thing, brought sorrow to none and left friends all along life's highway."

WINTER WHEAT CROP ESTIMATE IS LARGER

Open Winter Is Responsible for Condition April 1 Above Average.

(Associated Press.)

United States winter wheat production for 1931 was estimated yesterday by the Agriculture Department at 644,000,000 bushels—40,000,000 larger than last year and 93,000,000 greater than the five-year average.

An exceptionally favorable winter, the department said, was responsible for the April 1 condition which was 88.8 per cent of normal, 11.4 above the same date last year and 9.6 above the 10-year average.

On the basis of normal yield from intended spring wheat plantings amounting to 221,000,000 bushels, and 644,000,000 of the winter variety, the total 1931 production would be 865,000,000 bushels, or 14,000,000 more than last year.

The department said "the relatively high April 1 condition of the crop leaves the opportunity for a greater degree of loss than a gain in the yield." A 3 per cent reduction in all wheat acreage this year has been forecast.

In another report today, the department estimated the surplus which will be available on July 1 for export and carry over at 290,000,000 bushels, or 15,000,000 more than last year. The department saw an encouraging factor in the declining supplies of European importing countries.

The domestic winter wheat abandonment was approximately 4 per cent, against the 10-year average of 12.1 per cent. In all sections the condition was said to be well above the average except in a few States where the 1930 drought was severe and where rainfall during the germinating period was deficient.

Butler Coed Is Busy With Her Five Jobs

Indianapolis, April 9 (U.P.).—Students at Butler College here have such a diversity of part-time jobs that it would be almost impossible for an economic depression to hurt them, Mrs. Carrie Meredith, director of the students' employment bureau, said.

The most versatile of the students was Honor Gregory, Gosport, Ind., a coed who held five jobs and was looking for another, Mrs. Meredith said. The girl was housekeeper, secretary to one of the professors, waitress in a lunch room, taught stenography classes and minded children. She had an hour and a half to herself in the afternoon and was looking for some odd job to fill this.

Leader Convicted Of Selling Offices

Georgia Republican Leader Is Sentenced to Year and Day.

Atlanta, April 9 (A.P.).—A Federal jury here today convicted John B. Dove, former Georgia Republican leader, of selling Federal offices, and Judge Marvin Underwood sentenced him to serve a year and a day in the Federal Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio.

Dove admitted receiving the payments charged in the indictments, and $6,800 besides, which he said were turned over to the national Republican organization. The defense attempted to bring out that contributions to political funds constitute the normal method of acquiring appointive offices. Testimony intended to support that contention was barred by the court as irrelevant.

The jury convicted Dove on 38 counts of violation of the patronage act.

WOMEN WILL DRAFT LIQUOR VIEWS TODAY

Data on Dry Law Described as "Supplement" to Wickersham Report.

(Associated Press.)

Twenty-one women, comprising the National Commission of Women for Law Enforcement, gathered in the Capital last night prepared to draft today a composite report on prohibition described by their leaders as a "supplement" to the Wickersham report.

Announcement was made yesterday that this document, "giving the viewpoint of women on enforcement," will be taken to the White House tomorrow morning.

Additional copies will be sent to Secretary Mellon, Attorney General Mitchell and Chairman Wickersham, of the Law Enforcement Commission.

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the women's national committee for law enforcement, said the 21 women commissioners would attend a luncheon of the national committee tomorrow at which each would be called on for a two-minute radio address.

Among the 800 expected guests, Mrs. Peabody said, will be Senator Borah, of Idaho; Prohibition Director Woodcock and Commissioner of Industrial Alcohol Doran.

The composite prohibition report to be drawn behind closed doors today, will be based upon 22 bulky studies of various phases of the dry law problem. Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army, the twenty-second commissioner, who has written upon "Moral Gains From Prohibition," will not be present.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor of Pennsylvania, will give an answer to the question, "Can the eighteenth amendment be enforced?" Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, women's suffrage leader, will advocate "Enforcement—not repeal;" Mrs. Irving Fisher, wife of the Yale economist, will detail "Economic gains from prohibition;" Mrs. Richard Cabot, wife of the Harvard medical professor, will discuss "Alcohol and Health;" while Mrs. Clement L. Shaver, wife of the former chairman of the Democratic national committee, will outline the feminine stand upon the question of a third party in 1932.

FOUR SEE SUICIDE LEAP FROM BRIDGE

hospital. Reached by long distance phone in Richmond last night, Miss Good said she did not know the man.

During his stay at the Thirteenth street rooming house, Denton had little to say, and received few friends, Mrs. Steward told Lieut. H. Helms, of the Park Police, who investigated. She said he came there three weeks ago, left after a few days to go to the Homewood, then took his old room back. He paid his bill Wednesday, she said, and "checked out," nto disclosing where he was going.

Four Witness Leap.

R. K. Sinclair, clerk at the Homewood, said no one by the name of Denton had stayed there in the last three weeks. He said that a man somewhat conforming to his description had come there in quest of a room Wednesday night, but had been without funds, and had subsequently left.

Four persons saw the man make his fatal leap, according to Private R. L. Hammann, of the Fourteenth Precinct. Louis N. Goodman, 2148 O street northwest, was sitting on a bench in the park below, when he saw Denton suddenly clamber to the railing of the bridge and jump.

Ray Grigsby, of 3546 Alton place northwest; Mrs. James Clift, 3502 Alton place northwest, and John W. Harrison, of 306 S street northwest, who were crossing the bridge, also saw the man jump. Walter S. Ward, 2935 McKinley street northwest, one of the first at the rail, said a shoe was torn from the body as it fell.

Removed to Morgue.

Denton was pronounced dead a few minutes later by Drs. William F. Burke, of 2701 Connecticut avenue, and James F. Coupal, of 1424 K street northwest. Exactly 23 minutes after he struck the roadway below, he was removed to the morgue in a Fourteenth Precinct patrol wagon.

Police believe the "Capt. White" referred to in his note is Edward T. White, connected with the contact division of the bureau. Police were unable to reach him last night.

Police have a suitcase containing his personal effects taken from the house on Eleventh street northwest. Mrs. Steward told them that Denton, when he phoned her late yesterday, had told her she could give them away.

At the hospital it was said he had been treated for "a run-down condition."

Police Mystified By Model's Death

Kitchen in San Francisco Yields Young Woman's Body.

San Francisco, April 9 (A.P.).—The death of a comely young French woman, known as Miss Suzanne Allen, Mrs. S. Allen and Mrs. S. Adams, was being investigated by police today. The woman's body, clad in a kimono, was found face downward under the kitchen sink in her apartment. Physicians said she probably had been dead four or five days. Cause of death was not apparent and chemical tests were being made to determine whether she had taken poison.

The woman came to California a few months ago from Paris, France. She had been employed in Hollywood as a mannequin and more recently as a dress model in a San Francisco department store.

Among letters found in her room was one from "Le Gros Babon" (the big baboon), a man who begged forgiveness and asked for a "rendezvous for a little journey." Another letter was found signed "August." It was dated San Diego.

Mother Disowns Freak Calf.

Siltcoos Lake, Oreg., April 9 (U.P.).—A heifer calf with heavy, broad shoulders of a cougar and small ears, pointing backward, has been disowned by its mother here. The calf was born in the rain and left there, the mother refusing to nurse it. Its face is broad and flat, with three long, sharp fangs in the front of the mouth and two on the left. It gives the impression of a cougar's head and shoulders mounted on a calf's body.

CERMAK TAKES OATH AS CHICAGO MAYOR

New Chief Begins Cleaning by Ordering 2,000 Ousted From City Jobs.

Chicago, April 9 (A.P.).—Anton J. Cermak became mayor today, and immediately swished the brooms that bore his Democratic campaign slogan: "Clean Out the City Hall."

Forty-three hours after his election Tuesday, the successful Democratic candidate, who defeated Mayor William Hale Thompson (Republican), by 194,237 votes, took the oath of office as mayor of America's second largest city, and ordered the dismissal of more than 2,000 city employes who held temporary appointments.

This was Cermak's hour of triumph—and Thompson gave the Democrats a clear city for the celebration. Earlier in the day "Big Bill" left with a party of business men for his great lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway good will tour down the Mississippi, Illinois, Ohio and Tennessee Rivers.

Judge Administers Oath.

Cermak was given the oath of office by County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, after slipping into the county building and eluding thousands of followers gathered in lobby and corridors. Effective at once, the new mayor announced his resignation as president of the Cook County board, a post he had held for eight years.

Two civic leaders, advisers of Cermak in his campaign, were appointed to the cabinet—Col. A. A. Sprague as commissioner of public works and Francis X. Busch as corporation counsel. Mr. Busch's acceptance was for a 60-day period only.

A. M. Smietanka, defeated Democratic candidate for municipal judge, was appointed city prosecutor.

Ranking civil service members in the various city departments were placed in charge pending further appointments.

Dr. Hugh O. Jones, personal physician to Cermak, was made acting health commissioner, succeeding Dr. Arnold H. Kegel.

Mayor Meets Council.

Late in the afternoon Cermak met with the new city council, in which Democrats hold a ten majority, for approval of his bond and organization.

In his first official statement, Cermak ordered the city treasurer "not to honor any vouchers for temporary employes until it can be proved they worked for their money, and political work does not count. Under present conditions, unless actual savings can be effected, it will be difficult to carry on the business of the city for the rest of the year."

An immediate check of all departments was begun to find employes that could be dispensed with. First of the newly elected officials to receive the oath from Judge Jarecki was Peter J. Brady, city clerk. He was followed by Cermak. Then came City Treasurer James Kearns and Municipal Court Judge Edward B. Casey, the only Republican candidate to weather the Democratic flood of ballots.

As the mayor resigned his county board chairmanship, Emmett Whealan, Democratic leader, was chosen to fill his place temporarily.

Shouse Declines To Fight McAdoo

Reminds Critic of His Convention Support of Westerner.

Omaha, Nebr., April 9 (A.P.).—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the national executive committee of the Democratic party today issued a statement in reply to the letter of William G. McAdoo, Democratic leader, in which McAdoo declined to act on a Los Angeles reception committee for Mr. Shouse, and warned the party against acceptance of the policies of National Chairman John J. Raskob.

Shouse called attention to the fact that he had supported McAdoo before the national convention for Democratic nomination for President.

"I shall not be drawn into altercations with Democrats anywhere," Shouse said. "It is, of course, entirely within Mr. McAdoo's rights to decline the invitation to serve on the committee named to greet me in Los Angeles. I am going to the Pacific Coast in response to persistent urging by Democratic leaders in that section. I am going because these leaders have felt that I can supplement their organization activities. I am going to try and help pave the way for the election of the Democratic ticket in 1932."

Miss Smith Claims Altitude Record

Young Aviator Reaches 33,000 Feet; Forced to Descend Quickly.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., April 9 (A.P.).—Eighteen-year-old Elinor Smith, thrice beaten in her assault on the women's world altitude record, swept down on this field from a twilight April sky tonight with an altimeter reading of 32,000 feet. She believed she had broken the official record of 28,418 feet, held by Ruth Nichols.

It was a happy Elinor Smith who landed at 6:21 p. m. and was gathered into the arms of her mother. Forgotten was the terrifying experience of a scant two weeks ago, when the young air adventuress dropped 25,000 feet. Today's flight was her challenge, and she told its incidents eagerly.

"When I got up to about 30,000 feet my motor was a bit cool, and I cruised to warm it up. Then I climbed up to 25,000 feet and cruised some more. One of the altimeters stuck, but the other functioned perfectly. The roof of my mouth became cold from the frigid oxygen. When the altimeter registered 32,000 feet I found I had only gasoline enough for fifteen minutes more flying. I came down in long spirals."

Ruth Nichols sent Miss Smith the following message:

"Splendid work, Elinor. Records must constantly be broken if aviation is to advance. My best congratulations."

Miss Smith tonight cast challenging eyes toward the world's altitude record of 43,166 feet held by Lieut. Apollo Soucek, U. S. N. After resting and having a bit to eat, the girl flier said she planned an early attempt to break the mark.

Speaker Longworth's Career Was Marked By Refusal to Compromise Principles

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Speaker Nicholas Longworth with his daughter, Paulina (Harris & Ewing); another pose of the Speaker on the steps of the Capitol where he served so long. (Underwood & Underwood).

House Leader Measured Up to Best Traditions of High Office.

Loyalty to Administration Had in It Nothing of Servility.

There was a time, early in the present century, when the fame of Nicholas Longworth, member of Congress from Cincinnati, Ohio, rested chiefly on the fact that he was the husband of Alice Roosevelt, a popular daughter of a popular President.

In later years, however, he achieved national prominence in his own right, first as a member of the House of Representatives, then as majority leader, and finally, as Speaker of the House, an office that has been rated as second in importance to the Presidency of the United States.

Despite Mr. Longworth's natural tendency not to take himself too seriously, his colleagues in the House recognized in him not only a man who was eminently fitted by training and experience for his high office, but as one who measured up to the best traditions of the House of Representatives.

Aided Prestige of House.

In the years he occupied the floor leadership and Speakership he did much to restore the balance between the Senate and House contemplated by the framers of the Constitution, and his colleagues honored him for it.

His devotion to the House, his conception of the Speakership, and the zeal with which he upheld his ideals endeared him to his associates and accounted in large measure for the tremendous popularity he enjoyed, a popularity that extended beyond party lines. The House unquestionably enhanced its prestige throughout the country during the period of his leadership.

Mr. Longworth's rise to a position of influence in the Nation's council was neither rapid nor spectacular. It was a steady process. Seniority had something to do with it, of course, but it was not the controling factor. He placed himself in line for promotion and when the opportunity for advancement came, it never found him unequipped for higher service.

Authority on Parliamentary Law.

He had so schooled himself in the business of the House that long before his death he was recognized as an authority on parliamentary law as well as on all of the major legislative subjects with which Congress is called upon to deal.

His leadership of the House during the first two trying years of the Hoover administration was one of the biggest factors in the succes of its legislative program. Time after time, he and his associate leaders, backed by a united majority, forced a recalcitrant Senate to yield to the administration program.

He was loyal and unswerving in his support of the administration, yet there was nothing servile about his leadership. Jealous of the rights of the House, he resisted successfully every attempt to usurp its perogatives, and the members, irrespective of party, backed him up vigorously. A notable instance was early in the Hoover administration, when he blocked the plan of the President to have prohibition legislation considered by a special joint committee of the two branches of Congress instead of by the regular standing committee of the House.

Refused to Yield Principles.

Mr. Longworth refused to compromise his principles in the recent session of Congress, despite the fact that the outcome of the congressional elections last November reduced the Republican majority in the House almost to the vanishing point and placed his tenure of the Speakership in jeopardy. Realizing that the defection of one or two Republicans might return him to the floor, he nevertheless steered his course straight ahead to the very end of the session.

He was philosophical in defeat and gracious in victory. After the House adjourned sine die on March 4 last and the Speaker had acknowledged the plaudits of his colleagues in the love feast that followed the last session, he said:

"Perhaps this is the last time I will address you from this rostrum. It is only an all-wise Providence who is going to determine which of the two major parties will organize the next House. With whatever that Providence may decree, I am abundantly satisfied."

Unanimous Choice of G. O. P.

There is no question but that Mr. Longworth would have been reelected Speaker next December if the Republicans organized the House. He was the unanimous choice of the House Republican caucus that met last month, and the only way he could have been defeated would have been by the election of a Democrat, since no Republican who measured up to the job would have consented to run against him. He and the other two members of the House triumvirate, Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, majority floor leader, and Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, chairman of the House rules committee, were reconciled to the fact, however, that liberalization of the rules was inevitable in the event the Republicans retained control.

It is worthy of mention that Mr. Longworth achieved his greatest prominence, as well as the maximum of his popularity, in the House during a period of the country's history when intolerance and party irregularity exerted a marked influence in political affairs. He was neither intolerant nor irregular, nor did he cater to minorities.

Honored by Drys.

The Republican majority in the House that selected him to be its floor leader in 1923 was preponderantly dry. The same was true of the party caucus that elevated him to the Speakership two years later and of the three that renominated him for that office. During the 28 years Mr. Longworth served in the House, he has been an avowed antiprohibitionist. He represented a constituency that was wet, and he has voted in accordance with that majority view.

This was consistent with his theory of representative government, and consistent with his personal views on the subject. But the dry Republicans in the House had confidence, not only in his ability, but in his impartiality. Efforts to arouse opposition to his election as Speaker because of his views on prohibition were unavailing.

His greatly reduced majority in the election last year was attributed by his friends in part to the fact that he was true to his conception of the Speakership. During the six years he was Speaker, he took no part in the prohibition controversy, believing that his office prevented him from aligning himself with either the wets or the drys. His duty as he saw it, was to rule impartially. His opponents in the campaign last year used this as a pretext to spread the report over his district that he was dry, or at best, a lukewarm wet. But those who knew him knew that his position was unchanged. Had he lived, there is good reason to believe that he would have chosen an opportune time to set forth his personal views on the subject.

Mr. Longworth's two-year tenure of the Republican floor leadership of the House was marked by the most pronounced party insurgency since 1910. The Republican insurgents held the balance of power. But Mr. Longworth brought the party through that trying experience in such fashion that he was rewarded with the election of the highest office within the gift of his colleagues.

Perhaps his most spectacular performance ocurred in the Seventieth Congress, when he left the Speaker's dais to take the floor in opposition to the naval program advocated by President Coolidge, the first time a Speaker had exercised his right to oppose a policy of a President of his own political faith since the late Champ Clark took the floor to oppose the conscription act advocated by President Wilson shortly after our entry into the World War.

He lost the initial skirmish by a close vote, but when the question came before the House a second time as a Senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill, he repeated the performance, and was sustained by a majority vote of the House.

Held to Party Ideals.

The outstanding tenets of Mr. Longworth's political beliefs were adherence to the Republican doctrine of a protective tariff, advocacy of an adequate national defense, particularly a Navy equal to that of any other world power, insistence upon party regularity and party responsibility, opposition to international entanglements which bind this country in advance to do certain things, and a decided aversion to the bloc system in our National Government.

He was out of tune with the majority opinion of Congress on the prohibition question, yet he supported every appropriation bill since the Volstead act went into effect that carried an item for its enforcement. He belonged to that school of thought in this country which believes that ultimately the people will settle this question, once and for all, and settle it right. Pending that time, he believed that the law should be enforced.

Student of Revenue Problems.

Mr. Longworth's long experience on the ways and means committee afforded him an abundance of opportunity to study revenue and tariff legislation. He became a recognized authority on both tariff and taxes and the administration of laws dealing with these subjects. During a long period preceding his floor leadership he was the authorized spokesman of the Republican party when tariff and revenue legislation was under consideration in the House, and carried the brunt of the political phase of the debate preceding final passage of such bills.

He was forceful and uncompromising in his arguments, but his exchanges with his political opponents left no permanent sting. The friendship between him and Representative John N. Garner, of Texas, Democratic floor leader, tariff and tax spokesman, and his prospective opponent for the Speakership next December, was of the Damon and Pythias type. Yet on the floor in the olden President Cites Distinguished Public Services of Late House Speaker; Hundreds of Other Messages Are Received at Aiken.

Aiken, S. C., April 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the Speaker of the national House, received the following telegram from President Hoover, expressing his sympathy and that of Mrs. Hoover over the death of Mr. Longworth here today:

Hundreds of other messages from persons in all stations of life were received during the day.

(Associated Press.)

The President, upon learning of the death of Nicholas Longworth, issued the following statement:

"Mr. Longworth served his fellow countrymen in State and Nation for over 33 years—nearly the whole of his adult life. In his service he contributed greatly to the welfare of the American people. His happy character, his sterling honesty, his coxrage in public questions, endeared him and held the respect not alone of his myriad of friends, but of the country at large. His passing is a loss to the Nation."

LONGWORTH'S RITES SET FOR TOMORROW

Late Speaker of House to Be Buried in Cincinnati; Died Yesterday in South.

the winter resort, he developed a cold.

The cold was not thought serious at first, and no physician was called until Monday afternoon. A second consultation was held by physicians Monday night and it was then determined that he had pneumonia.

The news, however, did not reach the outside world until Tuesday night and by that time his condition had become serious. Mrs. Longworth was summoned and came as soon as possible.

Two Aiken physicians, Dr. R. H. Wilds and Dr. Thomas G. Brooks, were in constant attention, and they were assisted by Dr. V. P. Sidenstricker, an Augusta, Ga., specialist.

Signal Announces Death.

Early last night, bulletins given out by the physicians indicated the serious condition of their patient, and this morning Dr. Wilds told newspapermen it was "only a matter of a few hours" until the Speaker's death.

By a prearranged signal, in order to disturb the family as little as possible, Dr. Wilds had the shade to the bedroom raised at the moment death came and newspaper offices in the Nation had the flash before servants of the household knew Mr. Longworth had died.

Tomorrow when the funeral cortege leaves the Curtis home for the depot, the officials of the City of Aiken and Chamber of Commerce, have arranged not only to have the streets kept free of traffic at that time but all business houses will be closed for an hour.

The special train on which the body will be taken to Cincinnati will be operated at Government expense. It will consist of an engine, coach in which the body will be transported, dining car and Pullman space for newspapermen, and the private car of Charles Clark, of New York, son of former Senator Clark, of Montana, the "silver king."

Private Car for Family.

In the private car with Mrs. Longworth will be Mrs. Curtis, their host here; Col. Campbell B. Hodges, military aide to President Hoover and his representative on the funeral trip; Kermit and Archibald Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth's valet for 31 years.

In regard to especial show of mourning at Washington, where, both she and her late husband were social as well as leaders in statecraft, Mrs. Longworth merely said, through Dr. Wilds, a member of the medical staff during her husband's illness, that she would deeply appreciate whatever show of sympathy might be extended at the National Capital.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, sr., Mrs. Longworth's mother, and her sister, Mrs. Ethel Roosevelt Derby, are to attend the funeral at Cincinnati. Paulina Longworth, the only child of the late Speaker and Mrs. Longworth, now is in Cincinnati. She is 6 years old.

Curtis May Attend.

Vice President Curtis announced in Washington that he would probably attend the funeral in Cincinnati and appointed a committee of twelve senators to attend.

Speaker Longworth is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Annie Wallingford, Cincinnati, and Clara, the Countess de Chambrun, wife of Gen. Adelbert de Chambrun, commander of the French expeditionary forces at Tunis.

Island Is Too Far Away For Governor Roosevelt

San Juan, P. R., April 9 (A.P.).—Gov. Theodore Roosevelt will be unable to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, Speaker Nicholas Longworth, at Cincinnati Saturday.

The governor could not reach there by air sooner than Sunday morning, and since the insular Legislature closes next week with practically all important legislation still pending, the governor is understood to feel that his duty is to remain here until after the session ends.

Gridiron Dinner Delayed By Death of Longworth

(Associated Press.)

The Gridiron Club, with which Nicholas Longworth had met on many festive occasions, last night postponed its spring dinner out of respect for his memory.

The dinner of the club, an organization of Washington correspondents, was to have been held next Saturday night with Speaker Longworth and many other public men as guests. It will be held instead on Monday evening, April 27.

LONGWORTH SERVED POOR AND RICH ALIKE

Late Speaker Was Wealthy, but Never Let Money Become Barrier.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 9 (A.P.).—Nicholas Longworth was a common people's man in his own congressional territory, the First Ohio District.

The late Speaker, a wealthy man, never permitted riches to rise as a barrier between himself and any constituent. He represented all alike, aristocrat or beggar.

One characteristic which endeared him to his constituents occurred every time he arrived in Cincinnati. His first act on reaching home was to hurry to a telephone and personally call acquaintances by the score. He kept in touch with the commonest of supporters.

Was Talented Musician.

Another of his talents was that as a musician. He could play anything at sight on a piano. He was an accomplished violinist, owned a valued Stradivarius and often played with Eugene Ysaye, of Belgium, internationally known symphony director.

He was a lover of the Ohio River, sponsored its canalization and frequently during conferences with associates at his office here, somewhat abruptly arose during a discussion to spend many minutes gazing from his windows at the river as it wound its course between the Kentucky and Ohio hills.

He enjoyed hiking and sometimes walked the 4 miles from his fashionable residence to his office. This and golf were his recreations.

Speaker Longworth was born an aristocrat. He inherited much property on the West Side of Cincinnati, where in the early days his great-grandfather and grandfather amassed a fortune from vineyards. As the town grew the vineyards gave way to industry and residential sites and increased in value.

Paulina Not Yet Told.

His great-grandfather, also named Nicholas Longworth, amassed a large estate. Confident of the growth of Cincinnati, he obtained possession of much property, being known as a lawyer who would take land as a fee.

His 6-year-old daughter, Paulina, still was unaware of her father's death.

Landon Wallingford, nephew of the Speaker, said:

"I do not think the child will be notified of the death until arrival of her mother."

Paulina attends school here and is in care of her governess, Miss Dorothy Waldron.

Relatives also said the representative's death meant the passing from existence of the family name of Longworth. The Speaker had no male heirs and was the last male member of the Longworth family.

Polled Large Majorities.

Representative Longworth usually rolled up large majorities, sometimes as high as 30,000, in his district, which polled 100,000 votes.

A new Speaker of the House was considered a possibility for a short time, however, during the last November election, when John W. Pattison, Democrat, several times ran ahead of Mr. Longworth during the tabulation of votes. The final count, the last 100 precincts being from Mr. Longworth's stronghold, gave the Speaker a majority of 3,838 votes. Mr. Pattison, son of a former Ohio governor, received 47,218 to 51,056 for Mr. Longworth.

Mr. Longworth's survivors are his widow, daughter Paulina, two sisters, Countess de Chambrun, Paris, and Mrs. Nanny Wallingford, Cincinnati. An aunt, Mrs. Bellamy Storer, Paris, whose husband was appointed ambassador to Austria-Hungary by President Roosevelt, and who was the "Dear Maria" referred to in Mr. Roosevelt's celebrated letters, and three nephews, the sons of Mrs. Wallingford.

Kiwanis Club Renders Honor to Longworth

As a mark of respect to the memory of Nicholas Longworth, members of the Kiwanis Club stood in silence while taps were sounded at the group's regular meeting in the Washington Hotel yesterday. The program was in charge of Maj. James Asher, of the Salvation Army.

The speaker was Dr. Lyle Rader, of New York, whose subject was "Converting Waste into Useful Materials." John Gussio, a boy who lost a leg in an automobile accident two years ago, expressed his appreciation to the Kiwanis Club for help given him to obtain an artificial leg. Charles E. Riordan, patent lawyer, and E. Barbee Smith, restaurant manager, were introduced as new members. Musical selections were offered by Frank Longino, George Marshall and Fred Osmond.

the White House when he married Alice Roosevelt.

In President's Party.

There he had received a multiplicity of visitors—delegations seeking political favors, friends for a congenial chat, newspaper men for press conferences. Scores had crowded the room at times. He had met them all with words befitting every occasion, diplomatic expressions, friendly greetings, outspoken views on current events.

The President will be accompanied to Cincinnati by Mrs. Hoover, Postmaster General Brown, a lifelong friend of Mr. Longworth; Walter Newton and Theodore Joslin, two of his secretaries; Capt. Joel Boone, White House physician, and Capt. Russell Train, naval aid.

The Chief Executive probably will travel on a special train, leaving Washington some time tonight and arriving in Cincinnati in the forenoon.

Immediately after the services the President and his party will return to the train and leave at once for Washington, arriving early Sunday morning.

Mindful of her husband's love for social affairs, Mrs. Longworth telephoned her office late today to urge that Washington not permit his death to interfere with social events that had been planned.

It has been ten years since a Speaker died. On March 2, 1931, two days before the end of Congress, when his term would have expired, Champ Clark, of Missouri, died after a short illness, which like that of Longworth developed from a cold. A state funeral was held in the hall of the House.

Leaders of Nation Praise Longworth; Mourn Death

President Hoover Joins With Others High in Official and Business Life in Paying Warm Tribute to Speaker of House.

(Associated Press.)

Tributes to the memory of Nicholas Longworth came yesterday from people of high position in all corners of the country.

Praise for his legislative talents mingled with expressions of sadness on the passing of a friend. President Hoover mentioned his "happy character, his sterling honesty, his courage in public questions" in calling the death a loss to the Nation.

"The House lost a distinguished and able Speaker," said Vice President Curtis.

Garner Wires Sympathy.

The affection in which he was held in Washington was evidenced by the way Republicans and Democrats joined in eulogy. Representative Garner, leader of the minority in repeated attacks on legislation supported by Mr. Longworth, sent this word to Mrs. Longworth from his home in Texas.

"In Nick's passing the entire Congress has sustained a personal loss. My public service will hereafter lack that which his friendship gave. No one can take his place in my affection. Mrs. Garner and I extend our love and sympathy to you and Paulina."

The House Republican leader, Representative Tilson, predicted history would know Mr. Longworth as "one of the greatest Speakers of the House."

Courage for Any Crisis.

"I knew him intimately for more than 20 years," he said, "and in all that time never observed any act which could be attributed to selfish interests or to motives other than the purest patriotism.

"In his death the country has lost an eminent and able public officer, a man with the courage to face any crisis and with tact and judgment to handle any situation, however difficult. Those of us who knew him personally have lost a warm and loyal friend."

Other comments were:

Secretary Stimson:

"I am profoundly distressed at the news of the death of Mr. Longworth. He was a man of great ability and great personal charm. No one in public life was more widely liked than he. As Speaker of the House he will be deeply missed. He was always just in his decisions, firm and invariably fair minded. In his death the country has lost one of its outstanding public men."

Death Is Great Loss."

Secretary Mellon: "The death of Mr. Longworth brings a feeling of universal sorrow. To me, as to many others, it brings a sense of very real personal loss. He had those rare human qualities which make for friendship—qualities which, combined with his knowledge of men and events and his great ability and tireless energy as a legislator, made him for many years one of the dominant figures in Congress and in our national life. The influence which he exercised is far-reaching and his death is a great loss to his country."

Secretary Adams: "By tact and great human understanding Nicholas Longworth won a great position and was a vital aid to orderly and wise legislation."

Secretary Doak: "In the death of Mr. Longworth the Nation has lost a distinguished citizen and an able and conscientous public official. His devoted service to his country as a legislator and as Speaker of the House of Representatives is a record of high accomplishment."

Postmaster General Brown: "For me Nick Longworth's death brings to a close an association of 40 years. Occasional political differences were never able to mar the cordial friendship that existed between us.

"He was a partisan, but his partisanship was an instrument through which he served his country. He was an ideal legislator, courageous, kindly, informed, sincere and always proud.

"In his long and notable service in the Ohio Legislature and in Congress he never sacrificed principle for expedience. His untimely passing is an irreparable loss to his friends, his party and his country."

An Outstanding Statesman.

Secretary Wilbur:

"Mr. Longworth ran always true to form. His loyalty to his own ideas and plans bred loyalty in others. His career as House leader will be considered as of great historical importance.

"The passing of Speaker Longworth is a great shock to me personally. He was an outstanding statesman and legislator, admired and respected by all. His death is a loss, not only to his native State, but to the whole country."

Secretary Hyde: "Speaker Longworth was a man of sterling principle. He has left his impress on the history of the Nation, both in the legislation which he has favored and in the legislation which he has opposed successfully. He was a strong party man always. Nevertheless, he was able to fight his political battles without alienating the esteem of men with whom he differed. Both the party and the Nation have lost an able and devoted servant."

Attorney General Mitchell: "I was very fond of Longworth. Every one liked him. It was a great shock to me to have him taken away so suddenly. He had a long and fine public career."

Was Exceptionally Qualified.

Chairman Wood of the House appropriation committee:

"The loss of Mr. Longworth is a loss to the Nation. His long years as a member of the House qualified him as but few men have been qualified for exceptional service to his country.

"He died with the respect of all his colleagues and his memory will be cherished as long as those who knew him survive."

Chairman Royal C. Johnson of the House veterans' committee:

"It is a great tragedy. He was so lovable and at the same time so efficient that members of the House and the country will hardly realize their loss for a long while."

Senator Jones, Republican, Washington:

"To have been elected Speaker of the House of Representatives three times and named by his party for a fourth term stamps Nicholas Longworth as a man of great ability and capacity. His death is a real loss to his party and to his country."

Leaves Lasting Impression.

Senator McNary, of Oregon: "He was an able parliamentarian, a student of public questions, and he left a lasting impression upon the history of his time."

Senator Sheppard, of Texas: "He was an outstanding, brilliant and patriotic American and American people regardless of party will sincerely mourn his passing."

Senator King, of Utah: "His services have been important and valuable and as Speaker of the House he has won the commendation, indeed the affection, of members of his own party as well as those of the Democratic party."

Senator Trammell, of Florida: "His death is a great loss to the Nation and to the House of Representatives over which he so ably presided."

Was Splendidly Human.

William Tyler Page, veteran clerk of the House: "His personal qualities made him great. My relations with him, official and personal, were very close. Some one has said that the best that can be said of any man is that he was human. Mr. Longworth was splendidly human."

Chairman McFadden, of the House banking committee: "He was an able parliamentarian, and impartial."

Representative Bacharach, from his home in Atlantic City: "We have been intimate friends and boon companions. I owe him much for his friendly counsel."

Senator Watson, of Indiana: "He was a genuine partisan and in the heat of debate dealt vigorous blows, but he was so constituted as to be able to take punishment as well as administer it with a smile, and no scars were ever left after the battle was over. History can not fail to list him among the great presiding officers of the House."

Former Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, who preceded Speaker Longworth as Republican floor leader of the House:

"I feel I have lost a good friend and the country a splendid public servant."

Disaster to Party.

Senator George H. Moses, president pro tem of the Senate:

"The loss of Speaker Longworth is not only disastrous to Republican leadership in Congress and throughout the country, but it brings immeasurable sorrow to friends whom he numbered countlessly everywhere."

Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic leader:

"Annnouncement of Mr. Longworth's departure occasions great surprise.

"For many years he had been a prominent factor in national political affairs. Since he became Speaker he had been specially influential in the enactment and defeat of legislation. Mr. Longworth enjoyed many intimate friendships and was respected and admired by all of his colleagues."

Calvin Coolidge:

"The passing of Speaker Nicholas Longworth is a shock to all the country. His acquaintance was wide, his service had been long. Few men in public life had so large a circle of enthusiastic friends. This blessing came to him because he was able and friendly.

Decisions Respected.

"In his leadership of the House he was quiet, firm and effective. Both sides of the chamber held his decisions in respect because of their fairness. His discipline always had an air of graciousness in it which compelled loyalty without resentment. His attitude on public questions, his relationship with his fellow members in the House, and with other officeholders brought him a high degree of deserved popularity. He gained one of the chief rewards of public life in the enduring friendship of many thousands of his countrymen."

Chairman Hawley, of the House ways and means committee: "His ability and public services entitle him to a place in the memory accorded to great men."

Finis J. Garrett, a judge of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals and for four years Democratic House leader while Mr. Longworth was Speaker: "The fierce light of publicity shone upon him for more than a quarter of a century. Of course it may have etched some foibles, but it also illuminated the virtues of the man."

Death Is Public Loss.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, Ohio: "The Nation mourns the death of one of its distinguished citizens. Speaker Longworth has made a place for himself that extends beyond the realm of public interest. His varied ability and long experience eminently qualified him for leadership in many lines of human activity. He was most loved and respected in the House of Representatives, where he was best known and over which he presided with such dignity. He was respected as much of the minority members of the House as by the majority. His death is a public loss and a personal grief to thousands of his friends."

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith: "I hear with great regret of the death of Speaker Longworth. For years he has been a prominent and commanding figure in our national public life. His loss will be mourned by hosts of friends throughout the United States."

Gov. White of Ohio expressed regret. The governor said he had served with Speaker Longworth on the House ways and means committee during the World War and had become intimately acquainted with him during that time.

Messages of condolence were sent the Speaker's family and friends by Gov. White.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, former Illinois congresswoman and close personal friend of Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, said she was "shocked and deeply grieved."

Talked With Mrs. Longworth.

She said she would not be able to attend the funeral and would not leave here, where her son, Medill, is attending school, until next week. She talked by telephone to Mrs. Longworth in Aiken, S. C.

"I do not wish to make a public statement on Mr. Longworth's death," said Mrs. McCormick. "Mrs. Longworth apprised me of the death this morning. I am shocked and deeply grieved."

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York said:

"Both Mrs. Roosevelt and myself were deeply grieved to learn of the death of Speaker Longworth. We had known him well since we were children."

Mrs. Roosevelt is a cousin of Mrs. Longworth.

The death of Nicholas Longworth today was characterized as a "great public loss" by Frederick H. Gillette, former Speaker of the House of Representatives.

William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury: "The whole country, without regard to party, will deplore the death of Speaker Longworth.

"Shortly after I married Miss Eleanor Wilson, one of the President's daughters," Mr. McAdoo said, "Nick,' as he was popularly known to his friends, suggested to me that, as he was the only other son-in-law of a President of the United States then living in Washington, he and I should form the 'Sons-in-law Club.' I agreed and we made this the basis of a very informal and delightful friendship, to say nothing of the humor which he frequently injected into our 'club meetings.'

"I feel a deep personal grief that he has gone and, with his many friends, I pay tribute to his great qualities and the patriotic service he uniformly rendered to his country."

LONGWORTH'S DEATH KEPT FROM SISTER

Countess de Chambrun Is Ill in Africa From Bite of Caterpillar.

Tunis, Africa, April 9 (U.P.).—The death of her brother, Nicholas Longworth, in America, was kept from the Countess De Chambrun, critically ill here, today.

The countess, formerly Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati, Ohio, suffered blood poisoning after a caterpillar bite five weeks ago. The poisoning was complicated by bronchitis, and it was feared that the shock of her brother's death would prove serious.

The Count De Chambrun, however, has asked his wife's closest woman friend in Paris to come here by seaplane tomorrow and break the news of her brother's death. The countess and her brother, he said, had been very close to each other all their lives and exchanged weekly letters, the most recent of which arrived today from Mr. Longworth.

Son Flies to Bedside.

The couhtess' son, Count Rene De Chambrun, flew here by seaplane to be at his mother's bedside. The physicians attending the countess ordered complete quiet.

The blood poisoning which caused her strange illness followed a bite by a 4-inch caterpillar while the countess was asleep on an unscreened bed. It caused serious inflammation behind the eyes.

Doctors said it was the first such bite to come to their attention in 50 years. It was most painful, and the countess was ordered to discontinue her literary activities.

Remains With Husband.

She refused to obey her doctor's orders to leave Tunisia and return to the cooler climate in France, however, insisting that it was necessary for her to remain with her husband, who is commanding the French army in Tunisia.

She said she wanted to stay through the impending visit of President Gaston Doumergue, now on his way here, and due Saturday, for a brief inspection tour of Tunisia.

Clara Longworth, sister of the late Speaker of the House of Representatives in Washington, was married to Count Adelbert de Chambrun, member of the French nobility, in the Longworth house at Cincinnati on February 19, 1901.

Descendant of Lafayette.

The count is a descendant of Lafayette. He was born in Washington, where his father was in the diplomatic service, and has dual citizenship, being entitled to American citizenship by virtue of an act of Congress granting it to all descendants of Lafayette.

The countess was a popular member of Cincinnati society. She has spent many years in the French colonies of North Africa, where her husband has been on duty.

She is a writer, poet and student of Shakespeare. She is one of the few women to be made a Knight of the Legion of Honor. Among her books are "The Sonnets of Shakespeare," "Pieces of the Games," "Playing With Souls" and "Shakespeare—Actor-poet."

Legislators Honor Speaker in Death

Lawmakers in New York and Other States Express Regrets.

Albany, N. Y., April 9 (A.P.).—The memory of Speaker Nicholas Longworth was honored by the New York Legislature today. Resolutions expressing regret at his passing were adopted in both Senate and Assembly.

Raleigh, N. C., April 9 (A.P.).—The North Carolina General Assembly today adopted a resolution of regret at the death of Nicholas Longworth.

Columbia, S. C., April 9 (A.P.).—The South Carolina Senate today adopted a resolution expressing sympathy to the widow of Nicholas Longworth.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 9 (A.P.).—The Florida Legislature expressed regret today at the death of Nicholas Longworth. The Senate and the House ordered resolutions of sympathy drawn for forwarding to the Longworth family and to the next session of Congress.

REPUBLICANS NEED LONGWORTH'S SEAT

Party in Ohio Is Expected to Elect Successor for Former Speaker.

Cooper (Republican), of Wisconsin, and Representative James B. Aswell (Democrat), of Louisiana.

Wisconsin is expected to elect a Republican in Allen's place, and Louisiana naturally will send a Democrat here to take the place of Aswell. Thus, the line-up in the House will not be affected.

Line-up Is Menaced.

The death of Speaker Longworth, as a matter of fact, is the first death that has in any way threatened that line-up. If a Democrat should be elected in the place of Mr. Longworth it would put the two big parties in a tie, with each having 217 members.

The 435th member, and the one who could break a tie in the case of a strict party vote, would be Representative Paul J. Kvale (Farmer-Laborite), of Minnesota. Thus far, Kvale has never said how he will vote when the time comes to organize the House.

Representative Kvale, who comes near to being the baby member of the House, sits on the Republican side most of the time, but occasionally can be found sitting on the Democratic side.

Progress to Guide Vote.

He has said that he will vote for whichever party goes the farthest in espousing progressive policies. There are about a score of so-called Republican Progressives, who might take the same stand, but so capricious are they that it would be dangerous to make any forecasts as to what they will do eight months hence.

Under the Ohio law, Gov. George White must call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Speaker Longworth, and, though the law does not specify any time limit, the governor is expected to call the special election for the fall, when a municipal election will be held in Cincinnati.

Already a boom has been started for Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, and no doubt she could have the nomination to succeed her husband if she wanted it. The question of whether she would want it probably will not be answered until after her period of bereavement. She always has been an astute student of political affairs. At the same time, she always has insisted on keeping on the "sidelines."

Elected by Narrow Margin.

In the November election Speaker Longworth had a narrow escape from defeat. He squeezed through by the narrow margin of 3,507 votes, whereas, in 1928 he piled up a margin of 30,000 votes.

Two things were responsible for Mr. Longworth's small vote—the anti-Republican sentiment that swept the State at that time, and the failure of Mr. Longworth to wage a real campaign.

Normally, the Cincinnati district, which Mr. Longworth represented, is overwhelmingly Republican, and those familiar with the sentiment there anticipate the electio nof a Republican to succeed Representative Longworth.

Six Relatives Chosen Longworth Pallbearers

(Associated Press.)

Six relatives were chosen yesterday by Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth as active pallbearers for the funeral of her husband. They were Archibald and Kermit Roosevelt, her brothers; Buckner Wallingford, brother-in-law, and Wallingford's three sons, Landen, Buckner, jr., and Nicholas.

The announcement was made at his office after telephone conversations with Mrs. Longworth. Miss Mildred E. Reeves, secretary, said they were subject to change. A list of honorary pallbearers will be made public by Miss Reeves after she reaches Cincinnati.

Longworth Was Second Ohioan to Be Speaker

(Associated Press.)

Nicholas Longworth was the fortieth person to be elected as the regular and official Speaker of the Federal House of Representatives.

He is the second Ohioan to be Speaker. J. Warren Keifer, who still lives at his home in Springfield, at the age of 95, was the first. Frederick H. Gillett, of Massachusetts, is the only other surviving former Speaker. Keifer served from 1881 to 1883 and Gillett from 1919 to 1925.

Only three Speakers had longer service than Longworth. Henry Clay, of Kentucky; Joseph G. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, of Illinois, and Champ Clark, of Missouri, had longer service, but Clay's was broken.

Longworth's Political Foe, John Garner, Adds Tribute

Democratic Leader, Former Speaker's Friend Despite Legislative Differences, Mourns Death as Loss to Himself and Nation's Congress.

Uvalde, Tex., April 9 (A.P.).—Of the multitude who mourned the death of Nicholas Longworth, none grieved more deeply tonight than his chief political foe, but fast personal friend, Representative John M. Garner, Democratic leader of the House.

Intense partisans and with widely divergent backgrounds, these two political rivals maintained through years of legislative battling a personal intimacy with few parallels in American politics.

"I have lost one of the best friends of a lifetime, the country a good citizen and the Congress a most valuable legislator," Representative Garner said.

In Washington they were "Nick" and "Jack" to each other. Only a few weeks ago the veteran Texas representative bantered with his congressional pal over ownership of the Speaker's official automobile, which to Garner was always "our car."

"It will soon be all mine," Garner told his crony, anticipating the organization of the new House next December, when Garner is expected to be the Democratic candidate for Speaker.

Mr. Garner said he would attend the Longworth funeral in Cincinnati. He spoke with feeling of his association with Mr. Longworth since the days both were young representatives, and recounted that many a law now on the statute books had been smoothed out in personal conferences between them which were a daily habit. Both traveled much the same road to the leadership of their respective parties in the House, serving together on the important foreign affairs and ways and means committees.

"I knew him as a man and as a legislator, and he was the best type of each," Mr. Garner said. "His statesmanship was of the highest type and most patriotic. True, he was a partisan, but he was honest and courageous and loved his country. He was as fair and impartial a Speaker as the country has had in the last half century."

Mr. Garner reviewed some of their bitter differences in partisan legislation, and remarked:

"When the fight was over our efforts were celebrated in the usual manner—differences forgotten and good fellowship resumed."

"Mr. Longworth was an aristocrat; I am a plebeian," Mr. Garner said quietly, adding: "Perhaps the very fact of our different rearing intensified our interest in each other."

FIDELITY TO PARTY MARKED PUBLIC LIFE OF LONGWORTH

days they exchanged sledge-hammer blows—and they always said good-bys at the close of the day in the best of humor.

Intensive study of the tariff question never caused Mr. Longworth to depart from the traditional Republican policy of protection for American industry. He consistently opposed the tax views of the so-called radicals and Democrats in Congress. He adhered tenaciously to the theory that exorbitant levies on wealth dry up the most prolific sources of taxation and pass on the burden to those less able to pay.

His views on national defense were heartily in accord with those advanced by his distinguished father-in-law, the late Theodore Roosevelt. He regarded preparedness as the best guarantee for peace and tranquillity that a Government can give to its people.

Mr. Longworth was a severe critic of the international policy of the late Woodrow Wilson. His views in that connection are set forth in the following paragraph:

"I have been unalterably opposed to my country's entrance into the League of Nations. I am opposed also to its association in any manner with the league or any of its recognized and directed agencies. I want America to continue as she now is, unrestricted by any covenant, free to take such action as she may herself determine either in aid of her less fortunate friends or in the preservation of her own national interests."

His views on party responsibility and party regularity are best illustrated by the course he pursued in dealing with the Republican insurgents in the Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Congresses.

Insurgency Was Rampant.

Insurgency was rampant when he assumed the leadership of the Republican majority, which existed on paper only, in the Sixty-eighth Congress. The so-called La Follette group held the balance of power. A combination of Democrats and the Republican radicals could overthrow the Republican majority any time it was effected.

Mr. Longworth, ignoring the advice of certain party leaders who advised him to give up the attempt to organize the House, met this situation with an effort toward compromise. He sent for Representative John M. Nelson, of Wisconsin, leader of the insurgent group. As a result of their conference, Mr. Longworth made certain concessions, chief of which was a change in the House rules which made it easier for the House to discharge a committee from consideration of a bill. Mr. Nelson was given also a place on the all-powerful rules committee.

In return, the insurgents voted with the regular Republicans to organize the House. The insurgents continued to hold the balance of power and exercised it whenever they saw fit, but Mr. Longworth preserved the semblance of Republican control throughout the session and brought the party through its unhappy experience in such a way as to win the approbation of the party leaders.

Legislative Program Emphasized.

Moreover, the legislative program of the session was emphasized in the Republican campaign which culminated in the election of Calvin Coolidge by an unprecedented majority and the election of a majority of Republicans in both branches of Congress.

In the Sixty-ninth Congress, with the regular Republicans actually in control of the House, the concessions of the previous Congress were withdrawn; and the insurgents not only were shorn of their committee assignments as Republicans, but virtually were read out of the Republican party. Party discipline was restored, but at no loss to Mr. Longworth's prestige and popularity.

Mr. Longworth had decided views on what should constitute the duties of the Speaker of the House.

"The functions and duties of the Speakership as I view them, divide themselves into two general classes, the one parliamentary, the other political," he said, upon assuming the Speakership the first time.

"The first I shall endeavor to administer with the most rigid impartiality, with an eye single to the maintenance in the fullest degree of the dignity and honor of the House and the rights and privileges of its members.

Question of Party Service.

"The political side, to my mind, involves a question of party service. I believe it to be the duty of the Speaker, standing squarely on the platform of his party, to assist in so far as he properly can, the enactment of legislation in accordance with the declared policies of his party.

"I believe in responsible party government. I regard as among the most beneficent provisions of the Constitution those two which provide for the election of the entire membership of the House of Representatives every two years and for the divorcement of the Congress from the executive branch."

Carrying this thought a bit further, Mr. Longworth expressed his disapproval of a system of government by blocs in the following language:

"Just as I stand for the American system of responsible party government, I am against the European system of bloc government. I have observed its workings abroad at first hand. It works badly enough over there where legislation is generally a matter of bluster and trafficking between groups and where governments fall over night. Here it won't work because it is un-American."

In the early part of his congressional service, Cincinnati was one of the worst boss-ridden cities in the country, and the First Congressional District, which Mr. Longworth represented, contained the downtown wards that were completely under the domination of a political boss who held sway like a dictator.

His Elections Were Easy.

Mr. Longworth, a man of wealth and scholarly attainments, was one of the choice bits of window dressing that gave to the exterior of that political household a semblance of respectability. No one ever was permitted to contest with him for the nomination. His scoffers say that the reason was the liberal campaign contributions from the Longworth family, and this may have been partly true, at least. His election every two years was a walkover. Conditions have changed materially since then, but until last year, Mr. Longworth's hold on his district was unshaken. It had been growing stronger with each succeeding election until last fall, when something went wrong with the well-oiled machinery. Mr. Longworth died without knowing what it was or who was responsible.

A sad commentary on the life and career of Mr. Longworth was that he never was appreciated at his true worth in his home city, but there was compensation for him in the fact that his talents were recognized in the seats of the mighty in Washington. He had been a playboy in his youth, and remained so until his death for that matter, but his sturdy constituency at home never was able completely to reconcile his early adventures with the honors that came to him in later life. Exceptions should be noted, of course, for those who really knew him.

It can be said of him that he remained natural until the end. The role of the hypocrite or political opportunist never befitted him, and he never tried to portray either, publicly or privately. He was maligned bitterly by the witch-burners, and paid dearly for every step he took along the primrose path.

Mr. Longworth was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 5, 1869. His father was Nicholas, sr., outstanding lawyer, jurist and a man of wealth and prominence in political and civic affairs. The future Speaker had the advantage of a thorough education, graduating from Harvard in 1891 and subsequently attending Harvard Law School and the Cincinnati Law School. He was admitted to the bar in Cincinnati in 1894.

His first public office was as a member of the Board of Education of Cincinnati, to which he was elected in 1898. The following year he was elected to the House of Representatives of the Ohio General Assembly, and two years later was elected to the Ohio Senate. It was while serving in the Ohio Senate that he was nominated for Congress and his election followed in November. He took the oath of office in 1903 and had served continuously, except for two years, 1913-15.

He distinguished himself in the first term as member of the Ohio General Assembly as the author of the Longworth act, a statute which revolutionized completely the procedure for issuing bonds for public improvements. Under this law, which operated uniformly throughout the State, it was provided that a bond issue could not exceed a percentage of the total valuation of the taxable property of the political subdivision, except by referendum vote of the people. This law initiated a State policy that still is in effect and has served as a check against reckless extravagance and graft in public expenditures.

First Congressional Service.

Mr. Longworth's first service in Congress was as a member of the committee on foreign relations, where he became interested at once in having the United States Government own its embassies and legations in foreign countries. It was largely through his efforts that appropriations were made for the purchase or construction of buildings to house the diplomatic representatives abroad.

Following the retirement of the late Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor as the Ohio member of the ways and means committee at the beginning of the Sixtieth Congress, Mr. Longworth succeeded to the vacancy and held this assignment continuously, except for a two-year period of enforced retirement, until he was chosen floor leader. He was the Ohio member of the Republican committee on committees also for the greater portion of this time.

Mr. Longworth's most unhappy experience in public life occurred during the "Bull Moose" revolt in 1912. A conservative at heart, he could not follow his father-in-law, Theodore Roosevelt, into the Progressive party that year. He ran for reelection to Congress on the Republican ticket and campaigned for President Taft and the Republican national and State tickets.

Never Wavered in Allegiance.

Feelings ran so high that many long political friendships were broken, but Mr. Longworth never wavered in his allegiance to the Republican cause. It was a source of much gratification to Mr. Longworth that time has healed the wounds from that battle and has vindicated his stand. He went down to defeat temporarily, but came back stronger than ever two years later.

Unlike many men, Mr. Longworth knew when to work and when to play and he did both equally well. He refused to discuss public affairs when on pleasure bent. He was one of the most-sought-for men in Washington for dinners and social engagements. He was an entertaining conversationalist, with a keen sense of humor. For 25 years or more he has attended the dinners of the Gridiron Club of Washington, and his contribution to the after-dinner parties on those occasions will linger long as a happy memory to its members and the thousands of guests from all quarters of the country who were privileged to have an insight into his many-sided attainments.

An Accomplished Musician.

Mr. Longworth was an accomplished musician, and a discriminating musical critic who was in turn a patron of every worth-while musical project in his home and adopted city. He rarely missed a May Festival in Cincinnati and his advice and counsel was sought eagerly by the men and women whose activities have made Cincinnati one of the music centers of the country. He was a regular attendant at the concerts in Washington and only recently enrolled himself as one of the sponsors of the proposed symphony orchestra in Washington, manifesting the same interest in this meritorious enterprise that he always has shown in the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

When he played the violin it was in the hands of an artist. Even his good-natured banter failed to detract from the thoroughness with which he did things, whether it was among statesmen or at play among his friends.

Marriage International Event.

The marriage of Mr. Longworth and Alice Lee Roosevelt at the White House on February 17, 1906, was an international event. Last February, they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at their home here with a dinner to which were invited the attendants at the wedding and a few intimate friends. Hosts and guests wore the same costumes they wore at the White House ceremony. Three days before, the sixth birthday anniversary of their only child, Paulina, was celebrated appropriately.

Mr. Longworth was a member of the Queen City Club and the Blaine Club, of Cincinnati, the Columbus Club, of Columbus; the Somerset Club, of Boston, and the Metropolitan Club, of Washington. His home residence was 2414 Grandin road, Cincinnati. In Washington he lived at 2009 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Roosevelt Brothers Land Safely in Aiken politics is great, but it never has been directed toward active leadership. She has been in the vortex of a generation of Washington politics, but always she insisted upon remaining in the background.

It would be surprising if she withdrew permanently from the social life of Washington, with its engrossing drawing-room political gossip and maneuvers. Her friends expect her to remain, according to the Roosevelt tradition, a force in circles that have paid her deference as much for her talents as for her position.

Speaker Longworth once told Mrs. Borah, wife of the Idaho senator, that "Alice has an intuition that amounts to genius for understanding affairs, national and international."

Public affairs were the first common interest of "Alice and Nick." It is likely they were the ground on which developed the romantic courtship of President Roosevelt's daughter by the "boy representative" from Ohio.

It happened in 1905, on the Pacific ocean.

Alice went along with a mission to the Philippine Islands. "Nick" was a member of the commission.

They had known each other a year in casual social contacts, but it was this journey to the Philippines, their friends say, that was the beginning of their discovery of each other. A year later they were married, while the rest of the world gasped at the romantic glamour of the event.

Emperor, president and king sent gifts to the twelfth White House bride, and the crowding guests in the flower-festooned east room comprised one of the most brilliant groups ever gathered there.

Without attendants, Alice approached the altar holding her father's arm. The groom had many attendants.

The Cabinet, the diplomats, the socially elect from far and wide breakfasted in the state dining room while the bride and groom and intimates withdrew to a private wedding breakfast. Alice and "Nick" disappeared into an automobile drawn up to the south portico and were off to Europe.

It was on this wedding journey that Alice's name was given to a color. She was fond of a demure blue. Several of her trousseau gowns were of that light shade—ever afterward "Alice blue."

Romance remained with them. They settled in the Capital, and immediately their home became one of the most eagerly sought by society. They reveled in it. Far more than being entertained, they liked entertaining. To the last the Speaker was a host who welcomed dinner guests almost every evening and delighted in playing his violin for them.

A great wave of intense personal interest in the Longworths swept the country six years ago when it was learned they were to have a child. For months the news columns heralded the birth of Paulina, the daughter, who in six years has become one of the Nation's most celebrated children.

When she was born in Chicago, Speaker Longworth, sticking close to his job as Republican leader, was on his way to the House. As he entered Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, called for a cheer. After an outburst of applause Mr. Garrett voiced hope for a long and prosperous life for the infant.

Mrs. Marshall Field, of Chicago, sent Paulina a $1,000 check to be presented to her on her wedding day. She arrived on St. Valentine's Day, three days before the Longworths' eighteenth wedding anniversary.

Again last February the country turned its glance into the Longworth home. Silver wedding bells were ringing. The picture they saw was worthy of their interest; Alice and Nick were celebrating in character. The pompadour hairdress that belonged to "Princess Alice" came to the Capital and amused scores of Mrs. Longworth's friends. About 40 guests that evening saw the whole wedding scene recalled. "Alice" entertained them in a golden trousseau gown.

S O S Interrupts Memorial Service

Distressed Ship Off Cape Henry Cancels Call Seven Minutes After Broadcast.

(Associated Press.)

The Nation-wide broadcast of a simple memorial service at the National Cathedral in memory of Nicholas Longworth was interrupted yesterday by a call for assistance from a ship in distress.

The broadcast by the Columbia System from the Eastern stations of its chain was ordered stopped at 3:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, when the Navy Department received word of an S O S from the Danish ship Nordhval, 60 miles off Cape Henry, Va.

The Navy said several ships and stations were in communication with the vessel, which canceled its distress call seven minutes later, saying a ship was alongside.

The services for the former Speaker consisted of singing hymns, including "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Abide With Me," the reading the Twenty-third Psalm and a prayer by the Rev. J. Freeland Peter, canon of the cathedral.

Ohio Society Defers Session.

A meeting of the Ohio State Society of Washington, which was scheduled for April 13, has been postponed until April 27 because of the death of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, who was at one time vice president of the society. This announcement was made by H. W. Kitzmiller, secretary of the society, after he received instructions from Senator Simeon D. Fess, president of the Ohio group.

FIVE TRANSFUSIONS OF BLOOD USELESS

Former Montgomery County Deputy Sheriff Dies in City Hospital.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9108 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Despite donation of blood by five Montgomery County Policemen, J. Stanley Gingell, former deputy sheriff, died last night at Emergency Hospital where he was taken a month ago after a coal oil explosition at Poolesville, Md. Death was at 7:20 o'clock.

Gingell was burned when a companion, former Montgomery County Policeman Lawrence G. Clagett, attempted to revive a dying fire by pouring on it kerosene from a five-gallon can. The can exploded, causing the death of Clagett two hours later.

Gingell was brought to the hospital by the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department in a critical condition. He has hovered between life and death since that time. More than a dozen of his friends and companions have offered their blood in an effort to keep him alive. Five transfusions ahd been resorted to, the last one Wednesday afternoon.

Gingell lived at Rockville where he conducted a private detective agency and antique furniture repair business. News of his impending death cast a pall over the courthouse and throughout Rockville yesterday afternoon. Funeral services have not been arranged. The body was removed to the undertaking establishment of Warner E. Pumphrey at Rockville last night.

Other H. W. Talbott, prominent Rockville attorney, died suddenly last night at his residence. He had been in ill health but was able to go automobile riding yesterday afternoon. His death is believed caused by heart trouble.

Mr. Talbott, who was a native of Rockville, was a member of the law firm of Talbott & Prettyman, one of the best known law firms in the county, which has a large trust clientele. He succeeded his father, the late Hattersley W. Talbott, in the firm. William F. Prettyman is the other member.

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Catherine Choate; a daughter, Mrs. Allison Chapin, of Jackson Heights, N. Y., and a brother, Worthington Talbott, of Rockville.

Mr. Talbott was 54 years old and received his education at St. John's College, Annapolis, and at National Law School in Washington. He had been a member of the bar nearly 30 years. He was a Spanish War veteran. Always prominent in church circles, he was a vestryman and registrar of Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville, and a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was vice president of the Montgomery County National Bank at Rockville and of the board of trustees of the Rockville Academy, and an active member of the Rockville Union Cemetery Association.

Robbers early yesterday entered the postoffice building in Rockville and prowled about the second floor of the building, entering several offices, but nothing of value was missing, it was reported to Rockville police headquarters yesterday.

The burglars entered the office of the People's Life Insurnace Co. of Washington and ransacked the safe. They then attempted to break into the safe in law offices of Thomas L. Dawson, but failed to open it. They also failed to open the door of the office of Dr. Robert C. Warfield, a dentist.

A surprise thirtieth wedding anniversary party was given the Rev. and Mrs. Bertram Osgood in the parsonage of the Rockville Baptist Church Wednesday night. A large group of members of the church, as well as other friends, attended the affair. Dr. Osgood is known throughout the Eastern seaboard bceause of the many marriages he has performed for couples at Rockville.

A report on the success of its legislative program at Annapolis will be made to the Montgomery County Civic Federation Monday night by the legislation and legal action committee of the body. The federation will meet in the Bethesda School Monday night at 8 o'clock. This will be the next to the last meeting before the summer recess and it is urged that all resolutino scontemplating early action by the federation be presented at this meeting.

$5 Counterfeit Bill Brings Arrest

Medford Man Is Charged With Offering Spurious Money to Garage.

Wilmington, Del., April 9 (A.P.).—Medford B. Mann, 40, arrested near here by State police on a charge of passing counterfeit $5 bills, was held in $10,000 bail for a further hearing today by a U. S. commissioner.

Mann, who said he came from Baltimore, was arrested through information given police by Miss Gertrude Lester, an employe of a garage near St. Georges, Del. She said he stopped at the garage last night and tendered a $5 bill for a small purchase of tobacco. The appearance of the bill aroused her suspicion, and she notified police.

Officers took from him thirteen $5 bills which they said were counterfeit, and 289 genuine $1 bills. Authorities had been on the lookout for a man passing counterfeit $5 bills after receiving complaints from various garage owners and others between Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Nurse Executives Plan New Service

Improved Administration of Work Is Considered at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md., April 9 (A.P.).—An improved administration of hourly nursing service was considered by 200 executives of the Middle Atlantic division of the American Nurses Association which opened a biennial two-day meeting here today.

The hourly service, it was explained, is designed to serve patients ill at home or hotels; hospitals in emergencies; physicians in minor operations and emergency cases, and private schools which want a daily examination of pupils.

The executives represent 26,000 members of the association in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

LAWYER IS DROWNED IN SWIMMING POOL to resuscitate him continued for almost two hours after he was discovered unconscious at the bottom of the pool.

How Mr. Higgins came to his death is more or less a mystery. An autopsy will be held to determine the exact cause of death, although Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt said last night indications were that the man might have struck his head in diving and remained unconscious in 7 feet of water.

The man was seen swimming in the pool by two persons, but they said they paid no attention to him.

Later a group of boys, most of them senior students of the Suffern High School, who are in Washington on their annual spring trip, noticed an object in the deepest part of the pool.

Goetschius, a former Boy Scout with a merit badge for life saving, dived into the water and brought the man's body to the surface. His companions helped him drag Mr. Higgins to the side of the pool and they started artificial respiration.

Officials of the Y. M. C. A. were notified and a call brought the Fire Rescue Squad to the scene. They worked over the body for almost two hours before Mr. Higgins was pronounced dead.

Goetschius has a medal for life saving, given him by the Boy Scouts when he snatched a baby from in front of an onrushing freight train at Suffern. He is also credited with saving the life of a woman and a child on different occasions in the waters near his home town.

Mr. Higgins was a member of the law firm of Williamson & Scott, with offices in the National Press Building. He was a graduate of the National Law School and had practiced in Washington for a number of years. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus.

He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Miles J. Higgins, and two brothers, Raymond T. and Eugene J. Higgins, all of Washington.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Capital Man in Prison Hangs Self With Wire

William C. Butler, colored, who was sentenced here to serve 25 years in Leavenworth Prison on a second degree murder charge, was found hanging in a cell at the Federal prison early yesterday, according to word received here.

His father, William Butler, sr., lives on East Capitol street, near Sixth street. Guards found him strung from a steam pipe. A wire was tightened about his throat.

MADEIRAN MILITARY REBELLION SPREADING

Guns looked menacingly down on the city from surrounding hills, while naval vessels in the harbor also had their cannon trained in this direction.

The Azores garrisons, which are reported to have joined the Madeiran revolts, are on the island of San Miguel and Angra do Herosimo, where there are scores of political deportees.

The cabinet, meanwhile, wound up a special session with the announcement that work would be speeded up on harbor improvements at the port of Funchal.

The statement came as a surprise, for it included nothing regarding discovery of what was described as a revolutionary plot this morning in connection with which 30 persons were arrested.

In some quarters there was a belief that the government might be withdrawing from its determination to put down the Funchal revolt by force, and it was feared this sentiment might encourage rebels at home.

One of the men arrested this morning was Maj. Aragao, inspector in the army air force, but he did not stay long behind the bars. This afternoon he vaulted the prison fence, entered a fast automobile which was waiting for him, raced to the army airport and escaped in a commandeered plane.

Tonight's exhibition of force was explained by the minister of the interior as evidence of the government's determination to stifle all attempts to disturb public order. Some 30 arrests were made during the day.

Huge crowds congregated tonight outside newspaper offices to read the latest official communiques. These, as might have been expected, were of a reassuring nature. The minister of the interior stated that Portugal proper, including the colonies with the exception of Madeira, were quiet and the government's authority was unimpaired.

Nonetheless, the visit of King Alfonso of Spain, which originally had been scheduled for April 30 and then postponed until May 12, has again been postponed—this time indefinitely.

Maj. Aragao, inspector of the army air force, who made a dramatic escape in a commandeered plane after his arrest today, was reported to have been found with friends at Alientejo.

London, April 9 (A.P.).—The bloodless rebellion of Easter Eve at Funchal, Madeira Islands, appears to be more than a local insurrection, for it is headed by men who once held power in the Portuguese government and who never have given up hope of regaining control.

In 1927 former Premier Cardoso, Gen. Souza Dias, former Minister Fereira and other important leaders tried to overthrow the dictatorship, but were defeated and exiled to Madeira.

This triumvirate now arises as the force behind the present rebellion. There is indication that their hope of success is based on the expectation the island revolt would act as a spark to start a series of uprisings on other Portuguese islands and the mainland, ending in the ewentual overthrow of the national government.

Reports are being circulated that a revolutionary outbreak is imminent in Lisbon itself and, acknowledging the seriousness of the situation, the government has confined troops to barracks, canceled all military leaves and posted sentries at public buildings.

Although the provisional junta is headed by the three men named, the actual leadership of the revolt of the garrison and the seizing of power was in the hands of Lieut. Camoens, who was sent there after the February food riots to strengthen the forces and minimize the danger of just such a revolt.

Winchester Man Commits Suicide

Leaves for Work, but Returns Home With Shotgun to Kill Self.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., April 9.—Rodney H. Carper, 31, woolen mill employe, was found dead today in a garage in the rear of his home with a wound in the top of his head and a shotgun nearby. Medical and police authorities who investigated gave a certificate of suicide.

Relatives said Carper went to work this morning, but returned before noon. He had removed his coat and hat, taken one shell from a paper sack containing six, and probably sprung the trigger with a stick. Marshall Carper, a brother, found the body.

Carper was under treatment in a State institution for mental disorders some months ago. He was a son of Philip M. Carper. Others surviving are a widow, formerly Miss Cora Gatewood, three brothers and five sisters.

Juror Falls Dead Returning Home

Man He Helped to Convict Had Wished Members of Panel to Die.

Luray, Va., April 9.—Lester Pendergast, 54, owner of several tomato canning establishments in Page County, fell dead last night soon after returning to his home in Stanley from Luray, where he had served on a petit jury that sent Howard Comer to the penitentiary for attempting to murder Edgar Breeden.

As soon as Comer was given his five-year term in prison, he declared that he hoped every man on the jury that had given him a term in the penitentiary would fall dead before he began serving time.

A week ago Pendergast was excused from jury service in this county when he told Judge Bertram he could not serve on the case of David Sours, charged with the murder of Edward Buracker. Pendergast at the time informed Judge Bertram that he was opposed to the death penalty, it made no difference what the character of the crime.

POLICE INVESTIGATE DEATH RIDE IN AUTO

Michael Hendricks' Hurts Critical; James Panos Dead; Lad Held.

Montgomery County police are making a thorough investigation into the accident early yesterday in which one man was killed and another critically injured at Connecticut avenue and East Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md. Walter L. Hatton, 19 years old, of N street near Thirty-third street northwest, who was uninjured, is being held by Bethesda police under instruction of State's Attorney Stedman Prescott.

James Panos, 32 years old, 1131 Tenth street northwest, was dead when he arrived at Emergency Hospital, and Michael Hendricks, 38 years old, Thirteenth and Massachusetts avenue northwest, is in the hospital with a fractured skull and internal injuries. His condition was declared critical.

Used Brother's Auto.

According to the story told to the police by Hatton, he did not know the other two nor a youth who lived on Bradley lane and whom they had taken home prior to the accident. He met them at a pool room on Ninth street near H street northwest. The automobile used belonged to Hatton's brother, Charles Hatton, also of the Georgetown address.

As they left the home of the youth on East Bradley lane, Panos took the wheel, Hatton said. They were proceeding at a speed of about 40 miles an hour when Panos apparently lost control and crashed into an electric light pole near Connecticut avenue. Hatton was thrown clear of the car, he said, and when he came to, saw the auto in flames and his two companions pinned inside. He pulled both of them from the car before the flames reached them.

Edwin J. Sackett and Donald Reid, of the Chevy Chase Volunteer Fire Department, took the three to Emergency Hospital where Panos was declared dead by Dr. S. L. Tabb. Hatton was taken into custody and sent to the Bethesda substation by Montgomery County Policeman James S. McAuliffe.

Flames Are Extinguished.

In the meantime, the Chevy Chase department and the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department, which had been called by County Policeman Windsor Poole, extinguished the flames in the auto and it was towed to Burrows' Service Station in Bethesda, where it is being held in connection with the investigation. The car was reduced to a twisted heap of metal by the impact and the flames.

Sergt. Leroy Rodgers, in charge of the Bethesda substation, conferred for some time with State's Attorney Prescott and it was decided that Hatton should be held until a thorough investigation had been made. Hatton's driver's license had been revoked by Washington traffic authorities, police said.

Collision Is Fatal To Maryland Man

Everett Robey, of Silesia, Expires After Crash of Two Autos.

Everett Robey, 23 years old, of Silesia, Md., died yesterday in Emergency Hospital from injuries received on Wednesday in a collision between two automobiles at Seventeenth and M streets northwest.

Robey was riding in a light delivery truck driven by Ernest Jackson, 31 years old, of Broad Creek, Md. George W. Trevener, 51 years old, of 1428 Taylor street, was the operator of the second car.

Trevener said that his view of a stop sign was obscured by a parked car. George C. Fowler, 40 years old, of Annapolis, Md., the owner of the car, was arrested for illegal parking and released on collateral. Coroner Nevitt will hold an inquest today into Robey's death.

Doak Now Member Of Clerks' Union

Federation of Employes Present Special Card to Secretary.

William N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, yesterday became a full-fledged active member of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Secretary Doak was the first member of the Cabinet to become a member of the Federal employes' union. His acceptance as a member was made an especial occasion. Luther Steward, urbane president of the federation, and Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, presented the Secretary with a special membership card.

The card was a gold one engraved with Secretary Doak's name and other information, such as is printed on the thousands on thousands of other membership cards. Presentation was made in the office of Secretary Doak in the Labor Department Building. Mr. Doak refused to accept honorary membership, but insisted on becoming a regular member and paying his full dues.

Hearing the Whispers of Fashion

Even while a style idea is being whispered Mrs. Erlebacher is prepared to meet its acceptance.

For a style is the fashion only so long as it is confined to those who wear it gracefully.

Let a frock or coat be copied endlessly and it loses distinction in duplication and in the wearing.

While prices are always reasonable in the Erlebacher Drawing-Rooms, there is exclusiveness about the garments, because Mrs. Erlebacher is alert to capture the vogue in its bud.

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

Insatiable death claims Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House. Who would have thought of the fatal arrow striking down genial "Nick" Longworth? He was perpetually youthful in spirits, in versatility, in jovial companionship, and in zest for work. Yet Time was stealing upon him, and last session's heavy labors impaired his vitality. He was susceptible to the assault of pneumonia, without knowing it.

At the closing festivities of the last session of Congress, with Speaker Longworth the center of a happy interchange of good fellowship, he spoke in jest of the possibility of a political change that would take him from the chair:

> My colleagues: I need not say that I am profoundly grateful for this demonstration of your affection. Perhaps this is the last time that I will address you from this rostrum. [Laughter and applause.] I do not mean to insinuate that I regard it as a probability, but I must admit it is a possibility. The decision lies with none of us here. It is a decision that lies with an all-wise Providence. With whatever Providence may decree I am abundantly satisfied.

Although his remark was an ironical allusion to the uncertainties of politics, the Speaker's words aptly express his philosophy, with which he would have faced the King of Terrors. He had a happy life, with troops of friends, and fortunate promotion to high honors. Few men could have equal reason to say, "I am abundantly satisfied."

"Nick" Longworth served a long apprenticeship under "Uncle Joe" Cannon before he reached the Speakership. He was a stalwart Republican who made no apologies for championing his party and its policies. His fair judgment, good temper and quick perception were all natural qualifications for the Speakership, but he was also thoroughly trained and educated for his work. The House of Representatives has developed parliamentary law to a degree not approached by any other legislative body. Mr. Longworth was not only an expert in this branch of law, but was almost unequaled in his knowledge of the workings of the United States Government. He was partisan, but fair; and with a statesman's breadth of view he cooperated with other branches of the Government to promote the public welfare.

In the line of illustrious men who have presided over the House the figure of Nicholas Longworth will remain prominent. Only three Speakers served longer consecutive terms. None of them excelled him in winning the affection and respect of the House.

IMPERIAL VISITORS.

Prince and Princess Takamatsu, messengers of good will from the Emperor of Japan, will arrive in New York today for a tour of the United States and Canada. Prince Takamatsu is the third son of the late Emperor Taisho, and a brother of the present Emperor Hirohito. He stands next in line to Prince Chichibu as heir presumptive to the throne of Japan.

The visit of this imperial couple to Washington, which is scheduled for next week, will be especially timely. The city will probably be beautified by the famous cherry blossoms of Nippon. These delicate emblems of the friendship between Japan and the United States will remind the prince and princess of their own land. Thousands of Americans will flock to Potomac Park to view that gorgeous scene, and the imperial couple will come to know how deep an impression the gift of Japan to Washington has made upon the American people.

A personal touch of interest is also attached to this visit. Prince Takamatsu is a brother-in-law of the former Miss Setsu Matsudaira, who is now the wife of Prince Chichibu. Washington has a warm place in its heart for the charming princess, who was once a schoolgirl in this city. The reception of Prince and Princess Takamatsu will be unusually cordial because of her.

Japan does well to send these charming young people on a mission of good will to the Western world. They carry with them the grace and romance of the Orient. They are a reminder that Japan has adopted the ways of the modern world without losing its own culture and ancient traditions. America extends to these members of the imperial house a most cordial welcome.

HURTING HIS OWN CAUSE.

James D. Mooney, vice president of General Motors Corporation, laments the fact that the United States is not participating in European movements for economic unity. Speaking before the New York Board of Trade, he called attention to the proposed abolition of tariff barriers between Germany and Austria, and declared that the "great nations of the world are making trade arrangements with one another and threaten to leave America out in the cold." But Mr. Mooney did not single out any nation with which the United States could profitably negotiate a tariff holiday. With what country does he seek a special trade alliance?

The fact is that Mr. Mooney views American foreign trade from the selfish standpoint of the automobile industry. That industry has become so gigantic and so efficient that it no longer needs tariff protection. Therefore, it wants all tariff bars to be lowered or taken down, so that the United States can sell automobiles to all the world, and receive foreign goods of a different type in return. Let the American market be flooded with foreign wheat, with shoes, textiles, watches and a thousand other articles which undercut the prices of domestic industries, so that foreign markets may be flooded with automobiles. Because the majority of industrial and working men do not agree with this view, automobile manufacturers think their economic opinions are distorted.

Mr. Mooney points solemnly to the 1930 tariff act as one of the gross errors of the United States. Why should this country be putting restrictions on imports, he asks, when European nations are attempting to get rid of their tariff barriers? But Europe is a conglomeration of political divisions, none of which is self-sufficient. Each must trade with other countries for the necessities of life. If all of these countries were organized into one economic unit, it might then be comparable to the United States, but at present there is no basis for the application of the European situation to American industry and trade.

No nation in the world can offer America a market comparable to its own. For example, if tariff barriers between the United States and France were eliminated, this country would have a limited market for raw materials, automobiles and some machinery. In return France would have an enormously greater market in this country for her finished products, and many American industries would be put out of business. The United States is by far the greatest market in the world. It is absurd to think of opening this market to foreign exploitation when no other nation can offer an outlet for American goods that is in any way equal to it.

If all Europe should join in an economic union, it would still be no more economically independent than the United States. Assuming that economic union would make Europe prosperous, it would be a blessing to this country. Nations always benefit from their neighbors' prosperity. But no matter what happens in Europe, the United States will not deprive its citizens of their own market for the sake of selling more automobiles abroad. Mr. Mooney, when he advocates destruction of the home market, is unwittingly striking a blow at the automobile industry. Would he trade the home market for all the rest of the world?

NOT ONLY SALT RIOTS.

Political agitation in India has obscured the fact that the country offers great possibilities for trade and development. Not a few American firms are alive to the advantages for doing business under British rule, with the safety and sound money that such administration assures.

American hydroelectric interests have been expanding their efforts throughout India for several years. Exporters from this country find entry to the markets of the country unhampered by prejudicial regulations. The surprising statement was made by a recent trade investigator that there were probably more American electric refrigerators in India than in all Europe combined. American exports to India exceed $50,000,000 a year in value, and doubtless can be greatly increased, since this country annually takes three times as much in Indian products.

The development of great irrigation works throughout the interior of India has already brought many thousands of acres under cultivation, opening new channels for all kinds of modern appliances. Just now interest is centered upon the Lloyd irrigation works in the Province of Sind, which not only equals in importance all other irrigation systems in India combined, but is the greatest single scheme of the kind in the world.

The Lloyd project will develop a greater agricultural area than the Assuan project in Egypt or the Hoover Dam on the Colorado River. It will ultimately assure an ample supply of water to more than 5,000,000 acres along the Indus River. Another year will be required to complete the dam, and even longer for construction of 650 miles of main canals, 990 miles of branches and 4,260 miles of laterals. When the work is done agricultural production will be increased in value from $30,000,000 a year to more than $125,000,000. The project will cost upward of $100,000,00. Expansion of business and the increased demands for imports of every kind following the consummation of this great undertaking offer attractive opportunities for manufacturers all over the world.

REWARDS FOR PEACE WORK.

The Nobel peace prize has been supplemented by a Dutch award of the same character, which will be presented each year alternately to natives of Holland and to foreigners. The fund for this prize was the bequest of a Dutch banker, Johan Gerard Daniel Waterler, and will provide about $10,000 yearly.

Awarding of the prize is to be controlled by the board of the Carnegie Foundation at The Hague. It will be given to the person who, by means of art, science, politics, literature, &c., is regarded as having definitely forwarded the peace of the world. The will does not state whether the award is to be made first to a native of Holland or not, but the fund is now in the hands of the Carnegie board and the recipient of the first prize probably will be announced this month.

Peace awards and the act of distinguishing one man for his work are not in themselves as important as the modern spirit which prompts such deeds. Noble efforts for the welfare of the world are made with a love of humanity in the heart, and not for medals. Peace awards, however, are one more evidence of the eagerness of the world to find the secret of perpetual peace.

A DEMOCRATIC VISION.

The artless public did not realize that the defeat of "Big Bill" Thompson as Mayor of Chicago was a severe blow to the Republican party until Democratic senators pointed it out to them. Senator Gore views it as a Republican catastrophe, and Senator Lewis declares that Illinois has ceased to be a Republican State.

The fact that Anton Cermak piled up a lead of nearly 200,000 ballots over Thompson indicates that he was defeated by Republican as well as Democratic votes. As a matter of fact, this election has eliminated a sore spot in the Republican party. The party will no longer have to apologize for the indefensible. It was the indignant people of Chicago who pushed "Big Bill" off from his perch, but that does not mean that the same people will vote for a Democratic nominee for President.

Republican votes helped to give Senator Lewis a huge majority. Does he think that all the people who voted for him have become Democrats? It is apparent that the voters of Illinois exercised independent judgment. This very fact indicates that they will turn back to Republican candidates as eagerly as they turned away during the recent contests, when those candidates meet with approval of the party membership. It might be well to wait and see what the good people of Illinois do in the next presidential election before marking that State off from the list of Republican strongholds.

TO LIVE NEAR THE POLE

From the New York Herald Tribune.

With a radio set as their only means of communication with the outside world, Capt. Flandel M. Williams, of Dallas, Tex., and thirteen companions will sail from New York in the middle of July to live for two years in Fort Conger, just 390 miles from the North Pole and on the tip of Ellesmere Island, which was Adolphus W. Greely's base 50 years ago.

No human being has visited Fort Conger since Greely and the seven survivors of his expedition left it to be rescued in 1884 by Commodore W. S. Schley at Cape Sabine.

Fort Conger is accessible through the ice packs for only ten days each year, and the expedition will carry food enough to last four years if necessary. Twice daily weather reports will be radioed to the Weather Bureau in Washington, so that forecasters can predict Atlantic storms with greater accuracy. The expedition's main purpose, however, is to study the relationship between terrestrial magnetism, the aurora borealis and static electricity, and the results may have an important bearing on the elimination of radio static.

Besides the Weather Bureau, the Naval Research Laboratory and the terrestrial magnetism division of the Carnegie Institution are lending their support to the expedition, the financial backers of which have not been announced. Capt. Williams will represent the United States next year in the second international polar year, when 26 nations will join efforts to increase man's knowledge of the Arctic regions. Gen. Greely, leader of the expedition which founded Fort Conger 50 years ago, was participating in the first polar jubilee.

Two airplanes are included in the expedition's equipment, and 100,000 square miles of hitherto uncharted territory will be mapped, with the aid of aerial photography. Capt. Williams admitted that the aviators may fly over the ice very near the pole, although he would not say whether they expected to fly over the pole itself.

A special lens has been developed to permit the taking of motion pictures in color of the aurora borealis, which never has been done before. Fort Conger is at the so-called auroral pole, in the center of the northern lights, and the aurora will be visible on all horizons during the five and one-half months of polar nights.

Ellesmere Island lies adjacent to Greenland and Fort Conger is two degrees closer to the North Pole than Admiral Byrd's base at Little America was to the South Pole. The Williams expedition will set out in the Norwegian ice breaker Polar Bear, a 265-ton auxiliary schooner, in mid-July, it will sail up the coast past Nova Scotia, Labrador and the western shore of Greenland, reaching the Kane Basin late in August. Here the ice opens wide enough for a ship's passage for only ten days and the Polar Bear must slip through during that period, arriving at Fort Conger early in September.

The scientists and their crew will be frozen in soon afterward. Besides food and scientific instruments, they are carrying a library of books and many decks of cards to while away the long dark hours. Capt. Williams said they had so much work to do that there was little fear of boredom. Modern equipment and scientifically prepared food, he said, would eliminate the dangers suffered by the Greely expedition, chief of which was scurvy.

Since Fort Conger is north of the magnetic pole, the compass will point south instead of north. In addition to their other observations, in attempting to solve the mystery of magnetism and the aurora borealis the scientists will study the phenomenon of rising temperatures in the upper air levels.

The following comprise the scientific staff: Capt. Williams, Dr. H. B. Maris, physicist of the Naval Research Laboratory; Dr. Ralph L. Belknap, geologist of the University of Michigan; Clarence R. Kallquist, aerologist and meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau; Paul C. Oscanyan, jr., radio engineer, and John Charleson, pilot and aerial photographer.

THE FUTURE.

A little more bravely, a little more cheerfully!
A little less gravely, a little less tearfully!
A little more willing to start in and do things,
Down with the bygones and up with the new things.

A little more happily facing the morning,
A little less fretting, a little less scoring!
Let's turn to the battles that still are worth winning
Away from what's ended to what's just beginning.

A little less moping, a little less weeping
For what we have had but have failed in the keeping.
We've strength for the day so let's up with the sun now
And go with good heart to the work to be done now.

The Case Can't Be Tried Fairly Until People Can Discuss It Without Excitement.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHEN Abraham Lincoln had finished his short address at Gettysburg, another man who was counted a great orator delivered the oration of the day.

Type was set by hand in those days, but the daily newspapers in the larger cities printed the oration in full and editors wrote columns in praise of it.

Not one, however, printed the Lincoln address, and only one considered it worthy of comment.

Now the oration and the orator are forgotten, and Lincoln's brief address is a classic as familiar as the Twenty-third Psalm.

The judgment of posterity, frequently reversing that of contemporaries, is a just and wise judgment because it is unaffected by prejudice, enthusiasm, personal interest or popular clamor.

The average man is unwise in his judgments because he is part of a mob.

Partisanship is as natural to him as the drawing of breath.

If he sees two insects struggling over a morsel of bread, he becomes a champion of one or the other and resents the victory of its opponent.

Where there is conflict or competition, his sympathies make him a partisan; and he can no more avoid taking sides than he can avoid forming opinions.

This inherent capacity for partisanship is the thing that tricks him and warps his judgments.

His emotions confound his reason, and thereafter he comprehends only that portion of the truth which supports and glorifies the cause he has made his own.

That explains the blindness of contemporaries. They do not see a fact, but only the warped image of it pictured by a prejudiced imagination.

Men long forgotten vilified Washington, criticized the Louisiana purchase, opposed the adoption of the steam engine, considered the use of anesthetics wicked, and thousands of partisans as wise as we are thought them right.

If you would avoid similar follies, learn to view contemporary problems with the eyes of a historian. Distance alone can give perspective.

Forget the opinions of your group and try to imagine how posterity will view the matter in the light of another century.

You are posterity when you judge Lincoln. You can judge other men as fairly if you will keep the same point of view.

PRO AND CON

Indianapolis News.

Chairman Raskob, of the Democratic national committee, does not shrink from leadership and its responsibilities. There is, however, a question as to his right to assume that role. Chairmen of political committees have of late been disposed to magnify somewhat their office. But it may at least be said that, considering the difficulty and importance of the task he has assumed, he has not spoken or moved prematurely. The task is to hold the East and the West and South together in support of a platform declaring against national prohibition and in favor of economic policies that will appeal to the dry wing of the party. That is, as will be agreed, something of a job.

A failure to declare against prohibition next year probably will, according to the chairman, result in bringing two Democratic parties into the field in 1932. That is by no means improbable. The prohibition issue cuts straight across party lines. No one at this early day can say what the alignment will be. And it is idle to speculate. Raskob's immediate bid is, of course, for the support of the national committee. If he can get it, he will be "the big gun" in the Democratic party. If not, he will as certainly be retired as chairman.

And Then Some.

Philadelphia Inquirer.

Gov. Roosevelt, we read, "is amazed by his popularity with the Democrats." He should not permit it to turn his head. Popularity with the Democrats is a Mayfly, a bubble, evanescent, fleeting, precarious and impermanent.

Disaster Note.

Detroit News.

With so much sudden calamity in the news, an extra session of Congress might have been just the thing to help us forget the rest.

Walking the Plank.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

Chairman Raskob thinks the next Democratic platform should by all means have a wet plank for the drys to walk.

Jim Reed's Warning.

Topeka Capital.

Chairman Jouett Shouse's speaking tour of the West starts out with a wet douche from former Senator Jim Reed, who warns Shouse and all the Wall street following of John Raskob that "the party will sweep the country in 1932 unless it tries to ape the Republicans in catering to big business." On the other hand, the Democrats "must remain democratic; if they falter and trim on the fundamental issues of the party, they will deserve to lose."

Reed in his attack on the Raskob-Shouse faction of his party says:

"If the Democratic party is to depart from these fundamental issues, letters of marque and reprisal might as well be handed to the privateers to prey upon the commerce of the nation, for there will no longer be a party to restrain them. This departure, however, must be authorized by a Democratic national convention and not by some board or commission or the Democratic national committee."

No Danger of a Trial.

Rugby (N. Dak.) Tribune.

Leading economists of the country, most of them at least, declare that the debenture plan is unsound and absolutely impractical as a relief measure. But that doesn't need to make any difference to Senator Borah. He can talk about it, anyway, secure in the knowledge that in all probability it will never be tried. And the less that probability, the more strenuously and the more safely can he dwell upon its virtues.

Difference.

Dayton News.

Some one complains that prize fighters make more money than senators, but this only shows you can do better walloping a man into dreamland than you can by talking him to sleep.

Effective Poverty.

Boston Transcript.

As Mr. Hoover takes a good look at the deficit, you can't blame him for feeling that he has returned from one "poorhouse" to another.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Democrat Fears His Party May Be Swamped by Booze—Outlines a Platform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a truism that political agitation is a sign of health in a democratic form of government; and the present welter of politics is not greater than that which has been frequently experienced in the past. But in its interlocking confusion of issues between the G. O. P. and Democracy it seems to be in a class by itself.

I am what you might call a Democrat of the old school, and it is unpleasant to realize that at this writing my party flounders in greater danger of being swamped than its historic rival. Yet not long since I thought it might emerge on a platform which in its appeal to the steadfast Americanism of thoughtful voters would stand high and dry above the swish and swash of divers phenomenal cross-currents more or less involved in the wet issue.

Unfortunately, what ails us seems to be a lack of leaders, or perhaps it would be better to say lack of moral courage in the leadership.

It is hard to understand why self-respecting citizens in the field of politics should so frequently hide their thoughts under a bushel and, in considering a course of action, ask themselves whether it is politic rather than whether it is statesmanlike. It must puzzle more than a few sober-minded voters that men of undoubted ability should resort to the subterfuge and makeshifts of pot-house strategy when they aspire to high office.

The story of the past does not justify this year's crop of presidential possibilities in their time-serving attitude. The Presidents whose political success was most conspicuous, whose names are familiar to every schoolboy, were men who, like Jim Bludso, saw their duty a dead sure thing and were not only consistent but outspoken in support of party principles.

Probably nine-tenths of the electorate have by this time enjoyed more than enough of petty politics. But I am afraid the hour is too late and the likelihood seems to be that Democracy will again be wrecked on the question of booze.

So I must get what little satisfaction an old veteran can out of the reflection that the Democratic party would sweep the country next year if led by an old-school candidate on a platform nailed together with planks like these:

That national paternalism is not less at variance with the American system at the present time than it was when Jefferson condemned it; that the course of events is demonstrating that the advice of Washington against entanglement in European politics is as sound today as it ever was; that a low protective tariff should be enacted to hold the American market for Americans; that, in order to avoid stultification of the Constitution the prohibition law, pending its abrogation by the people, should be vigorously enforced.

Parks Can Hold and Attract Song Birds With Little Trouble—A Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our parks are brightened by the presence of many song birds, but these songsters only linger for short periods within the city limits, as the parks do not afford them a suitable surrounding for nesting. I refer particularly to the song sparrow, cardinal, mocking bird, brown thrasher and cat bird. The birds mentioned like to build their nests in vines or bushes, preferably honeysuckle or rambling rosebushes.

I think that it would be a very good idea to plant ramblers or honeysuckle in the parks and train them upon trellises, so that they will beautify the parks and encourage song birds to nest there.

I have noticed many flickers and red-headed woodpeckers in the city parks at different times, but they, too, are deprived of the proper nesting places; hence they are rarely seen except in the woods. When a tree dies in one of the parks, ivy might be planted at the base and trained to run up the tree in order to cover the dead limbs. If this were done members of the woodpecker family could find nesting places, as they construct their nests by hollowing out a section of a dead tree.

Everybody loves to hear song birds, particularly the people in the city who rarely hear them. Therefore I think that the parks should be made to attract the song birds, and it can easily be done while adding to the beauty of the parks.

New York Former Democrat Says He Will Rejoin Party if McAdoo Is Nominated.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How long would the Constitution of the United States last, or the country itself for that matter, if Mr. Raskob's ideas of repealing amendments should prevail, and the various States only obeyed those laws that they liked?

Mr. Raskob has a temporary strangle hold on the Democratic party; he wants booze to take the spotlight and will not let go until the drys of the South and West knock him loose from his back molars.

William G. McAdoo, who has proved his ability as a business man, is the natural selection to head the Democratic party in 1932. Born in the South, trained in New York and practicing his legal profession in California, his chosen home, Mr. McAdoo possesses all the requisites to appeal to the Southern and Western voters. He is educated, he is for prohibition, he is an experienced executive, he has the traditions that are called for in the White House.

I left the Democratic party because I couldn't stand the crowd that control its destinies in New York, and will gladly return if a man of the McAdoo type is nominated. We need statesmanship, not booze advocates, to help solve the country's difficulties. EUGENE HUDGINS.

RELIEF APPEALS END PASSOVER OF JEWS

Synagogue Speakers Ask Aid for Sufferers Abroad and in Palestine.

The eighth-day Jewish Passover holiday, commemorating the deliverance of the Jews from Egypt, was brought to a close yesterday with religious services in the orthodox synagogues.

From all the pulpits special appeals were made to Washington Jewry to support the United Jewish Campaign for relief work overseas and for the Jewish homeland movement.

Isidore Hershfield, cochairman of the drive, addressed the congregation of the Sixth Street Synagogue, picturing distressing conditions in Eastern Europe.

He said:

"Let me call to your attention that the Jewish people of Poland and Bessarabia are going through a horrible economic crisis, with thousands of Jewish families literally starving. The charitable organizations and public schools will be forced to close unless immediate aid is granted."

Louis E. Spiegler, president of the District Zionist Organization and director of the United Jewish Drive, addressed the Emerson Street Synagogue on the need for aiding the Palestine cause.

Oscar Leonard, secretary of the Jewish Welfare Federation, spoke at the Fifth Street Synagogue, and Bernard Danzansky addressed the congregation at the Hebrew Home for the Aged.

The united Jewish campaign for $60,000 will be launched April 19 with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith. Funds raised will be devoted equally to relief in Europe and the Palestine cause.

Lawyer Admitted While in Hospital

Raymond W. Farrell Signs Name to Register as Rule Is Broken.

Raymond W. Farrell, 28-year-old World War veteran, literally had the "court" come to him when he was admitted to practice before the District Supreme Court.

Because of his illness, he was unable to appear in court and the assistant clerk of the court, Alf G. Buhrman, took the register that lawyers sign, to the Walter Reed Hospital, where Farrell was permitted to affix his signature. The eligibility of Farrell to practice was ordered by a general session of the Supreme Court justices on motion of John Paul Earnest, chairman of the admissions committee of the Bar Association.

Farrell was confined to the hospital at the time of the bar examinations but he was able to leave his cot long enough to take the examination. The procedure of admitting lawyers has never before been broken in this way, it being the rule that the prospective lawyer must appear in court.

National Theater Players To Aid Greater Washington

Performance Pledged to Board of Trade's Campaign.

S. E. Cochran, manager of the National Theater Players, yesterday pledged the support of his troupe in the Greater Washington movement sponsored by the Washington Board of Trade. The pledge was made at a meeting of that association, held at the Mayflower Hotel, and carried with it the promise of a Sunday night performance in the National Theater, when all proceeds will be turned over to the organization now being formed to promote the interests of the National Capital.

Immediately after the receipt of the promise members of the Board of Trade gave Mr. Cochran a vote of thanks. He laid before members of the organization plans for contributing the service of his theater players, stage hands, musicians and all connected with the house for a special performance.

The chairman of the meeting, Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, set the date for the performance for May 3, and the play to be presented will be "Death Takes a Holiday," one of the outstanding dramatic hits of the past season.

A. C. Case is chairman of the Greater Washington committee, and Mr. Fleming is chairman of the committee having to do with the campaign. They are working hand in hand with George Plitt, president of the Board of Trade, and the following persons are also actively connected with the project: Merle Thorpe, W. W. Everett, E. C. Graham, Lanier P. McLachlen, Lloyd B. Wilson, Daniel L. Moorman, E. C. Brandenburg, R. J. Cottrell and Charles W. Morris.

An executive manager for the Greater Washington campaign has been selected. He is Ward H. Marsh, formerly of Detroit, Mich., and he has already started on the project. Between the present time and May 3 various committees will have been appointed and plans for the completion of the undertaking formulated.

Members of the National Theater Players who will take part in the performance of "Death Takes a Holiday" include Leneta Lane, Stanley Ridges, Mrs. Hibbard, Daphne Wilson, Raymond Bramley, Roberta Beatty, Forrest Orr, Burke Clark, Edward Poland, Frank S. Peck and Desiree Harris.

GREATER CAPITAL FUND NOW $37,050

Confidence Expressed That Quota of $50,000 Will Be Exceeded Soon.

An additional $8,300, bringing the total thus far subscribed to $37,050 of the desired quota of $50,000, was reported at a luncheon meeting yesterday at the Mayflower of the greater National Capital committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

Confidence was expressed by Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the committee, that the quota of $50,000 will be exceeded by the next meeting to be held next Friday. The sum announced yesterday represented the partial subscriptions of only 8 of the 28 business groups that are to be solicited for funds for the campaign. Subcommittees assigned to several of the groups will hold meetings before the next meeting of the general committee.

Business groups that swelled the fund yesterday included the retail merchants, transportation, public utilities, graphic arts, local newspapers, the M. G. Gibbs Drug Co. and investment and security houses.

Capital Folk In Mourning For Speaker

Hoovers' Cancellation of Dinner Followed by Others.

AFTER a winter marked at the White House by distinct gayety in contrast to the preceding season shattered by state mourning, the President and Mrs. Hoover again face a disrupted calendar with the distressing news of the death of Representative Nicholas Longworth at Aiken yesterday.

All functions of state character have been canceled until after the funeral of Mr. Longworth in Cincinnati tomorrow. The dinner planned by President Hoover for the Assistant Secretaries of the several departments, which was to have taken place at the White House tonight, has been canceled.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson have canceled all engagements until after the Cincinnati services. They were to have been guests last night of the Ambassador of Italy and Donna Antonietta de Martino and this evening the Secretary and Mrs. Stimson were to entertain at dinner in honor of the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Ferrara.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Antonietta de Martino also called off the dinner arranged last night, as did the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, both dinners claiming a roster of distinguished guests. Mrs. E. A. Harriman also called off her luncheon arranged for today in honor of Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde.

Should a long period of mourning have been decreed by the President the busy calendar of events which next week surround the arrival of the royal prince of Japan, Prince Takamatsu, and his bride would have occasioned a great deal of readjustment. With a dinner scheduled at the White House on April 15, the evening of the arrival of the royal couple; a dinner by the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Adams on April 16, one on April 17 by the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William R. Castle, jr., and on April 19 by the Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy, Capt. Shosuke Shimomura, in addition to formal and informal dinners and receptions arranged by the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Debuchi, things would have been in a complete state of change.

The President and Mrs. Hoover are to be the honor guests of the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Wilbur on April 21. No change in plans has yet been announced.

Party Planned To Aid Russian Exiled Orphans

Maxim Karolik to Sing at Entertainment in Langhorne Home.

A distinguished group of sponsors will attend the entertainment at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Cary Devall Langhorne on Tuesday evening, April 21, which will benefit the general hospital and small orphanage for Russian exiles situated in Sofia, Bulgaria. Mr. Maxim Karolik will give a group of songs and Mr. Paul Leyssac, dramatic artist, will be presented. Mr. Leyssac is of the Civic Repertory Theater of New York.

Assisting in the arrangements are Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and Mrs. Philip Lee Phillips and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman. The late Maj. Imbrie and Princess Cantacuzene instituted the Russian relief work in Washington which has been maintained since that time by the continuous efforts of its officials.

Mr. Karolik has a colorful career marking his musical background. A member of the Chicago Opera Company for many years, the gifted Russian now makes his home in Washington. With Mme. Karolik he entertains a great deal here as also in Newport, where he spends some time during the season.

Always delighted to assemble in the splendid ballroom of the Langhorne house, society will probably turn out in full force for this program. Dr. and Mrs. Langhorne live in the house of Mrs. Langhorne's mother, Mrs. Thomas Gaff, who has been in Bermuda the greater part of the winter.

Occupied last year by the former chairman of the Republican national committee, Mr. Huston, and prior to that time by the Dwight F. Davises, the place has housed families of "high degree." Called the "red, white and blue" house because of its red brick, white trim and blue shades, the home assumed an added significance as one of the outstanding ones of the city, while the ballroom is one offering particularly fine acoustics as well as being one of noble proportions, which combination is like a gift from the gods for private musicales.

Among the additional patronesses for the concert and dramatic program are:

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Senora de Padilla, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Mrs. David Sinton Ingalls, Mrs. William Veazie Pratt, Mrs. Mark Lambert Bristol, Mrs. Charles Denby, Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Mrs. Deming Jarves, Mrs. John Parker Jackson, Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, Mrs. Arthur Jeffrey Parsons, Mrs. William Cabell Rives, Mrs. Charles R. Sheppard, Mrs. William McClelland Ritter and Mrs. Edward Walker.

Mrs. Sidney West entertained a party of twelve at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel, the occasion marking her birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Barrington, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Martin and Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Medford are visiting in De Land, Fla.

Miss Florence A. Norton and Miss Marjorie Benton, of Guilford, Conn., are passing a few days at the Dodge Hotel and are accompanied by Miss Eunice Arnold, of Madison, Conn., and Miss Anne E. Rogers, of New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis G. Hayden, of Annapolis, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marguerite Weems Hayden, to Mr. Richard V. Gott, son of Maj. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Gott, also of Annapolis. The wedding will take place the latter part of June.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Haske announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret E. Haske, to Mr. James A. Sullivan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sullivan. The ceremony was performed yesterday morning in St. Matthew's Church at 9 o'clock by Mgr. Edward L. Buckey and was followed by a nuptial mass.

Miss Margaret Parker was the maid of honor and Mr. Joseph D. Sullivan, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

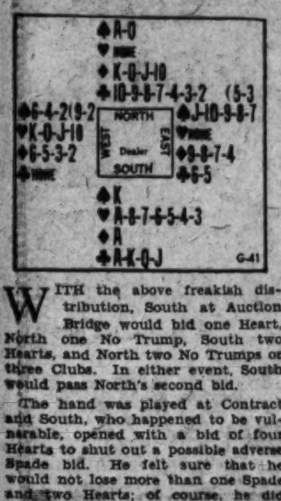
CONTRACT BRIDGE.



WITH the above freakish distribution, South at Auction Bridge would bid one Heart, North one No Trump, South two Hearts, and North two No Trumps or three Clubs. In either event, South would pass North's second bid.

The hand was played at Contract and South, who happened to be vulnerable, opened with a bid of four Hearts to shut out a possible adverse Spade bid. He felt sure that he would not lose more than one Spade and two Hearts; of course, he did not dream of the actual distribution of the adverse Hearts. West doubled, and North came to the rescue with a bid of four No Trumps which secured the contract. (Had North bid five Clubs, South would have bid for at least a small slam; and a grand slam would have been a showdown.

West's opening lead against North's four No Trumps was the Jack of Spades and South's King won the trick. South then led the Ace of Diamonds to unblock that suit and followed with his four Club honors. Next came the Ace of Hearts, but after that there was nothing to it; West took in five Heart tricks and set the contract two tricks although North won a final Spade.

Could the Declarer have made his four No Trumps despite the blocking distribution of the Diamonds and Clubs?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The hand is a "lay-down" for thirteen tricks if North's Ace is played over South's King on East's opening lead of the Spade Jack. Then South's Ace of Diamonds should have been discarded on a lead of North's Queen of Spades, and South's four high Clubs on North's four high Diamonds. Then the seven Clubs remaining in the North hand could be run to capture the last seven tricks. Declarer would have the novel experience of "trashing" six high winning cards—particularly novel because that would be the one and only method of winning thirteen tricks.

Annual Kite Test Is Set for Today

Contest Will Be Staged at Anacostia Field; Balloon Contest Is Feature.

The second annual kite contest of the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League will be held at Anacostia Field from 1:30 to 5 o'clock this afternoon. The field has been placed at the disposal of the league by the office of public buildings and public parks.

A balloon contest, open to all comers, will be a feature of the meet. Balloons will be furnished by the league without charge to the boys and girls participating. An individual fee of 5 cents will be asked, however, to cover the cost of filling balloons with gas and to pay return postage on the card which will accompany each balloon.

Those who find the balloons will be asked to return the cards, so that entrants may know how far their balloons sailed. As many as 300 kites will be flown in this afternoon's contest, it was announced. Fifty boys already have registered for the event.

Dare Interprets the Mode

An exceedingly graceful satin evening coat, with volants crusted right into the body of the coat. (A Dah-ray design.)

Paris, April 9.

FOR summer evenings cotton takes a proud place midst silks and satins. And why not? Cotton not only looks cool, but actually is cooler than silk. Besides, we can no longer consider cotton an economy material, for the most important fabric makers are turning their attention to it and are making it anything but inexpensive.

So what more lovely—and appropriate—than a fresh crisp cotton organdie for your summer dance frock? Whether you choose a very formal evening frock or not, just as you please, for I have seen both in delicate pastel shades and white.

As you know, several houses were making cotton evening gowns last summer. Chanel made a frock of all-over eyelet embroidery (broderie anglaise) on white cotton; I saw this model at a night club in Biarritz. It was one of the most striking gowns there. Lanvin had some beautiful organdie frocks last year.

But I think this summer we will see many more. In the new Premet collection for summer there were several formal evening gowns in organdie. The one I thought the loveliest was all white. From hip yoke to the floor the gown flared, of course, and consisted of a series of large tucks, each edged with tiny Valenciennes lace. The decolletage was straight, having small straps over the shoulder. On one shoulder was a mass of flowers; being a flower in this case consisted of being a ruffle of organdie edged with Valenciennes and sewed into roundness.

They call them evening scarves and evening throws and evening this and that at the couturiers, but they tell me on the side that women buy them for every imaginable occasion—and if they can't imagine an occasion—they buy them anyway!

I have every reason to believe that because it's exactly what I do myself—something tells me instinctively that I'll have a lot of uses for a thing and I buy it no matter what it happens to be called, and often have more uses for it than I imagined.

That's the way it will be with the two lovely little things which you can make from this week's illustrated leaflet, if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for it. You make both of them out of 1½ yards of material, and one is especially for evening and the other more for a bed scarf.

It would be all in the cut, this very elaborate and graceful evening coat that I designed for you today. The upper volant is cut right in one piece with the incrustation, you see, the second cut with the second incrustation and the third one, which gives the train effect in the back, also ends the coat in the front at just a little lower than jacket length. I would have this made of heavy satin or velvet, and if it were pink or peach it would be collared in silver fox.

• • • •

If you really want to know about expensive and elegant kid gloves for evening, and whether or not they're actually indispensable, I'll whisper you a teeny, tiny secret! You don't have to wear them this summer if you don't want to, that is, for the average informal summer evening wear. Just figure out for yourself the approximate formality of your evening gown and the occasion for which you are dressing, and choose or don't choose to wear gloves accordingly.

• • • •

Trimmings, their whens and wherefores, are discussed in Dare's weekly fashion letter in next Sunday's Washington Post. Of course, you'll want to look for it.

Au revoir!

—FRANCES M'DONALD—

The "Other" Woman's Happiness.

DEAR Frances McDonald: A letter which was printed in your column has been read by about a dozen middle-aged women, some single, some widows and some married—happily and otherwise. The letter concerned the right of a wife to hold her husband to his marriage vows after he had met some one he preferred to her.

Nearly every one agreed with this woman that the wife should give her husband a divorce. He, on the other hand should, of course, help with the support of the children, but retaining a man against his will by a woman he can mean nothing except as a means of support, is little short of crime.

We are all poor weak humans and I have known more than one person who has fought half a lifetime trying to "do right" because some legal wife felt called upon to be revengeful—nothing more. It can not be for happiness that these wife-stickers clamp on, so why not let two of the three have what little happiness there is on earth (and goodness knows there is little enough, at best), instead of causing misery to all concerned. If there is such a thing as getting paid for our wrong-doing, I feel positive that these wives will come in for their share.

Who but a cheap person would want to cling to a man who didn't want her. It wouldn't hurt some of these women with their soft snaps to go to work instead of assuming a hurt attitude for support alone. They don't pretend that they have love or even respect left for the husband. Innocent victims of fate are to be pitied but who, more, than the man and girl who find out too late that some one is standing between them and their honest love?

There are many such cases whether the world believes it or not. Wives are not always perfection because they bear the name, so how about extending a little pity to the other woman occasionally?

HARMLESS WIDOW.

If one's personal happiness were all that mattered in this world then, of course, no one should be made unhappy if the small matter of donating a mere husband were all that stood in the way. But when a woman has brought into the world three children, she is quite likely to place their rights above the rights of some strange woman who has taken a fancy to their father. This may be pretty primitive reasoning, but if more people so reasoned our orphanages would not be crowded as they are today with children who are not orphans at all, but the fragments of wreckage from marriages split up because some one wanted to be happy in the only way their mentality could visualize "happiness." Such people are usually the overemotional type who are not happy even after they have had their way, wrecked a home and sent small children homeless to some institution. Is it strange then that those who have seen the other side of the picture should agree that the wife's rights and the children's rights be considered before those of the new interest in the husband's busy day?

There are wives who are not worthy of any one's consideration, but the mother of three small children is entitled to all the protection the law allows and the wife referred to in that letter had three small children and a husband who could not support two homes. As all of this was stated in the letter it is difficult to understand the "dozen middle-aged women" who are so zealous for the happiness of the "other" woman and so condemnatory of the mother in her hour of stress. Few wives want to look at a husband they know to be unfaithful. But most mothers prefer that nauseating sight to the sight of their children in one of those orphan homes that stand as monuments to the selfish egotism of those who beget and then disown helpless and innocent children.

Let the dozen middle-aged women think again. And this time think of the children and their right if not to happiness at least to a home.

Diamondstein Family Asks to Change Name

An application to change the family name from Diamondstein to Diamond was made to the District Supreme Court yesterday. Eight members of the Diamondstein family signed the petition, which sets forth that the commonly used name is Diamond, and that there is some embarrassment when the legal name is different from the one in frequent use.

Those who signed the petition asking for the change in name were Bessie, Sidney B., Jennie, Julius, Ida, Sara, Aaron, Nathaniel and Leah Diamondstein. The last two are minors.

War Marriages Blamed.

Berlin, April 9 (U.P.).—The increase in 1929 of 2,500 more divorce cases than in 1928 was blamed by officials here on the collapse of war marriages.

YOUR NAME

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Seeley" (also written "Seelie" and "Sealy") is of English origin. It is derived from the Old English "saelig." This adjective has an interesting history. It originally meant "blessed" and "happy." The history of language shows a tendency on the part of mankind to associate blessedness and extreme goodness with innocence and simplicity. From innocence and simplicity, according to the popular mind, at least, it is but a step to silliness and stupidity. The Old English word "saelig" has developed in the way indicated above, so that it has now become our modern word "silly." When originally applied as the nickname which has given the modern family name, "Seeley" meant "innocent" and "simple." However, there is evidence that in a few cases "Seeley" was used as a pet form of "Cecil." The personal name "Cecil" (also written "Cecilia") is of Latin origin and means "blind." One of the distinguished bearers of this family name was Sir John Robert Seeley (1834-1895). He was a professor of Latin in University College, London, and acquired fame as an historian. In early English records this name generally appears with the spelling "Sely." The hundred rolls includes the names of William Sely, Egidius Sely and John Sely.

The family name "Selig" has come down to us from two quite different German sources. It is sometimes derived from the Germanic stem "salwas" meaning "dark" and "dusky." In most cases, however, it is the equivalent of the English name "Seeley," and therefore means "innocent" and "simple." A peasant named Peter der Selige is known to have been living in 1276. At the present time this name frequently occurs with the spelling "Seelig."

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

SOW SEEDS OF SUCH ANNUALS AS TRANSPLANT EASILY.

THIS is the time to advance the blooming period of your garden three weeks by sowing such seed as you will be able to transplant successfully a little later when the weather permits you to plant the seedlings in the open.

Some of the annuals which come under this list are acroclinium, China aster, basketflower, helicyrsum, lobelia, petunia, phlox drummondi, scabiosa and verbena. Any or all of these may be started in a sunny window or in a hotbed.

In the case of sweet alyssum, balsam, calendula selome, cosmos, portulaca and zinnia it is just as well to wait and sow the seed in the open.

Start the seed in a shallow box, such as an empty cigar box. Spread an inch of drainage material over the bottom of the box. You can use any material, such as small pebbles, that will serve to take away the surplus water. On top of this layer of drainage place an inch and a half of good sandy loam. Use about one-third loam and two-thirds sand. Smooth this over evenly and then sow the seeds. Cover them very lightly with soil rubbed between the hands. Next cover the boxes with glass and keep them shaded with paper until the seeds show signs of sprouting, which will take, with many seeds, from a week to ten days. You can easily tell when the seeds have germinated by the appearance of the tiny sprouts above the surface of the soil.

While the seeds are germinating you must pay attention to detail. Keep your seed box moderately damp and remove the glass for a short time every day, preferably in the early morning, to allow the box to dry out somewhat. When replacing the glass always turn the dry side down. After the seeds germinate the glass can be removed altogether.

When the seedlings are about 2 inches high they can stand all possible sunlight. As soon as they are well started the box should be removed to a cooler place. They will germinate in a room where the temperature is around 60 degrees during the day, provided it is sunny. The temperature must not, however, fall below 50 at night.

What Today Means to You

"ARIES."

IF April 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from noon to 2 p. m., from 4:30 p. m. to 6:10 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10:15 p. m. The danger hours are from 10 a. m. to 11:45 a. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:50 p. m.

By putting forth your utmost energies on April 10, the stars prognosticate that you will be able to accomplish your ends. The signs are exceedingly favorable and intelligent effort will be amply rewarded. On the other hand, speculation and risk must be avoided.

A child born on this April 10 will be pugnacious, but not necessarily quarrelsome. These fighting qualities will serve it in good stead in later years. The signs denote that it will often be beset, but never overwhelmed, with difficulties. It will always "fight through."

If born on April 10, you have a very vivid imagination, are impressional and enthusiastic. You are never satisfied with conditions as they exist. You imagine betterments, and get to work to alter and improve. You, too, are very quick to grasp a new idea and are always ready to adapt it to your own use. The enthusiasm that you show in your work—always strongest when reverses threaten—is contagious, and those who labor with you "catch it"—and the trick is turned.

You are a born executive, capable of great responsibilities and worthy of complete confidence. In spite of your outstanding ability, you are modest and always attribute success, not to yourself, but to those who have helped you. With such a "make-up" it is not to be wondered at that you can count on an army of loyal friends whom you never "let down."

You possess an excellent memory, and are a good judge of character, original and inventive. Both men and women, born on this date, are good mates, fond of their homes, and devoted to children.

Successful people born April 10:

2—Benjamin H. Day, founder of New York Sun.
3—Thomas R. R. Cobb, lawyer and soldier.
4—George Arliss, actor.
5—Lewis Wallace, soldier, lawyer and author. Wrote "Ben Hur."

FLAG WINNERS TOLD IN POST TOMORROW

Names of School Entrants Must Be Submitted by Noon Today.

Every contestant must be at the Franklin School Building promptly at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Tardiness will disqualify the contestant. This is necessary in order that the list may be checked, papers allocated, and the test put through on schedule time. We would regret to disqualify any student, but must do so if that student is not in place at 9 o'clock or before. JAMES A. MOSS, Colonel, U. S. A., Retired, President General United States Flag Association.

Names of the winners in each school in the contest being conducted by the United States Flag Association with the cooperation of The Washington Post, must be in the hands of Flag Association officials at national headquarters, 923 Fifteenth street northwest by noon today. Receipt of the names of the leaders in the various high schools by noon is absolutely essential to the working out of plans for the preliminary test at Franklin School building tomorrow, at which time the six boys and six girls who will compete in the finals on April 18 will be selected.

Many of the schools already have handed in the names of the girl and boy who are to represent them in the preliminary test and these names are being arranged alphabetically and cross indexed in the name of the school, so that it will be easy to locate every contestant. There will be a roll call tomorrow morning promptly at 9 o'clock, at which each student will be required to answer to his or her name, thereby identifying each to the committee. In case of doubt, the student answering to any particular name will be required to give a short explanation of the essay to which that name is attached. This is done to prevent any possibility of substitution, or the claiming of unwon honors by any outsider.

Preparing for Tests.

In the meantime national headquarters of the Flag Association presents a busy scene as preparations for the written examination and oral quiz of the students at the Franklin School tomorrow are made. The questions for both the examination and the quiz, prepared under the direction of officials of the Flag Association, have been printed and, together with the official answers, are locked in the safe, not to be removed until they are taken to the scene of the contest tomorrow. Each student will have a copy and will prepare answers according to his or her knowledge of the United States of America, its institutions and ideals, and the United States flag.

The United States Flag Association will continue its policy of refusing to give information over the telephone or to persons who call at the headquarters of the association. Every bit of information in regard to the contest is published in The Washington Post. The names of all entrants in the preliminary test will, if received in time at Flag Association headquarters, be published in The Washington Post of tomorrow. Only by reading The Post daily can the contestants keep up with the facts concerning the contest, and in this connection it is advisable for every contestant to continue to read the daily essays on patriotic subjects prepared by Col. James A. Moss, president general of the United States Flag Association, and published exclusively in The Post.

With tomorrow's contest the race for places as "Envoys of Friendship" on the good will trip to France and England will be narrowed down to six boys and six girls, all of whom will take part in the final test a week from tomorrow. Elaborate plans are being made for this final test, with a list of highly prominent persons as judges and a program that will be filled with interest from start to finish.

Will Be Given Medal.

All boys and girls who qualify for the preliminary test tomorrow will be entitled to receive the "Old Glory" medal of the United States, carrying with it membership in the Order of the Flag, but these medals will not be presented until the final tests one week later, in order that every boy and girl chosen to represent one of the high schools of Washington may have a part in the ceremonies attendant upon the selection of the two final winners.

"We feel that these boys and girls who win the right to represent their schools in the preliminary test tomorrow should have an opportunity to take part in the finals, even if they do not qualify as contestants," Col. Moss, president general of the flag association, said yesterday. "For this reason we have arranged purposely to delay award of the "Old Glory" medals until all the medals are awarded at one time at the finals. Even the boys and girls who fail to win in the preliminary test tomorrow have cause to congratulate themselves. They have been in competition with thousands of their fellow students in the high schools, public and private, of the city, and to have won the right to represent one's school in this patriotic event is no mean honor. We want every one of them present at the finals. We want the prominent people of Washington and their fellow students who are present to see what a fine group of young men and women entered this contest, and we want to do them honor and bestow their medals in front of this assemblage which will see the other medals conferred on the winners and their alternates."

The written examination in the preliminary test will be conducted tomorrow morning, with the oral quiz following in the afternoon.

The judges will be three educational leaders from Georgetown University and an equal number from George Washington University.

Stansfield to Become Union Head Tonight

Joseph Stansfield, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who was elected president of Employes Union No. 2 in two weeks of balloting, will be installed with other officers of the local at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

Other officers to be installed include Harlow Bacon, first vice president; Mrs. Sophie J. Bergner, second vice president; J. Ernest Brault, third vice president; O. B. Bowman, fourth vice president; E. I. Snyder, fifth vice president; Henry G. Nolda, secretary-treasurer; Albert M. Reising, recorder, and Elmer Thompson, guardian.

Peace With Honor Urged As Preventive of War

This is the tenth of a series of essays of the flag which are intended to assist entrants in The Post-United States Flag Association "Envoy of Friendship Contest" in preparing for the preliminary test to be held April 11.

By COL. JAMES A. MOSS,
U. S. Army, Retired, President General, United States Flag Association.

Another big war would be much more disastrous than the last one, the World War, which was the greatest cataclysm in the history of humanity, with its record of 21,000,000 men wounded and 8,500,000 killed and died and billions of dollars of property wasted and destroyed. What with the perfection of poisonous gases and bombing planes, and the invention of new instruments for the destruction of life and property, the terrors of another war are inconceivable, especially the horrors and sufferings of the women, the children and the aged men far behind the battle areas. When we consider these things we realize that it is the solemn obligation of every well-wisher of mankind to do everything in his power to help establish permanent peace among the nations of the earth. Especially is it the sacred duty of the parents of today to do all they can to see that their children and their children's children are spared the horrors and sufferings of modern war. It is something they owe their progeny.

As a veteran of three wars—as one who has written more military books (thirty some odd) telling men how to kill other men in war (for the very good reason that if you don't kill your enemy first, he will surely kill you)—I do not hesitate to say there is no loftier patriotism than keeping your country out of war through honorable and peaceful means.

DRY MEETING HEARS MORALS ARE BETTER

Optimistic View of Liquor Law Enforcement Is Pictured.

Progress in enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and a continued rise in public morals was noted by speakers yesterday at the quarterly conference of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, at Eastern Presbyterian Church, Sixth street and Maryland avenue northeast, with more than 700 persons attending.

The Rev. Everett L. Eaton, field secretary of the Board of Temperance, Methodist Episcopal Church, told of a recent trip through the South, declaring that he "saw no liquor in Florida, none on Pullman cars, and only one drunk in California." He claimed that lawlessness is not caused by prohibition and that there was much less drinking now than during saloon days.

His talk was followed by a paper by Miss Georgia Robertson, contrasting saloon days and the present time. More than 60,000 persons died yearly from alcohol before prohibition, she said, and statistics were unable to fix blame for that many deaths from liquor at present.

"You might as well try to stop theft of automobiles and other personal property by repealing theft laws and penalties for robbery, if it is the thought of the country that lawlessness will be cured by repeal of the prohibition laws," she declared.

Other speakers on the program included the Rev. Alfred E. Barrows, Miss Laura B. Lindley, Miss Martha Van Rensselaer, of the White House Conference; Chaplain R. Earl Boyd, U. S. A.; Miss Mary Erwin and Mrs. Edna Proctor.

A program given by youthful members of the Loyal Temperance League under direction of Mrs. R. T. Stout, district director, followed the business session. Those taking part in it were Richard Newton, Polly Creech, Betty Hollister, John Wall, Harry Davis, George Covel, Annie Jones, Stella Clayton and a chorus of 200 children.

James B. Bonner Claimed by Death

Was Stationed in Capital for Time by Iron and Steel Institute.

James B. Bonner, of Philadelphia, formerly stationed in Washington as vice chairman of the committee on steel distribution of the American Iron and Steel Institute, died in the Pennsylvania city Thursday, according to word received here yesterday. He was 68 years old at the time of his death.

Mr. Bonner became associated with the Carnegie-Phipps Co., Ltd., when their offices were opened in Philadelphia and continued with that company and its successor, the Carnegie Steel Co., and affiliated organizations, as sales manager of the Philadelphia district. During the time he was stationed in Washington he was commended by Gen. Pershing for his work for the Government during the World War.

He was a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia; the Union League, also in that city; the American Iron and Steel Institute, New York, and the Metropolitan Club in Washington. He was born in Philadelphia.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Anne A. Bonner; a daughter, Mrs. C. G. Gilliland, wife of Commander C. G. Gilliland, U. S. N., and a son, Leonard A. Bonner, all of Philadelphia. Funeral services will be held in that city tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Diana M. Mallon Funeral Is Today

Death Takes Daughter of Old Family on Eighty-fourth Birthday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Diana M. Mallon, widow of the late Michael Mallon, who died Tuesday at her residence in Fort Myer Heights, will be conducted from the Epiphany Episcopal Church this afternoon at 2 o'clock, with interment following in the Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Mallon's death came on her eighty-fourth birthday. Since the death of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Siggins, a year ago, Mrs. Mallon has been in ill health. Her death Tuesday was attributed to pneumonia.

She was the daughter of William and Diana Minnix, both of whom were prominent in early history of the Capital. She grew to womanhood in the section of the city just west of the White House and the State, War and Navy Building, and married Mr. Mallon soon after he came to Washington from Canada. Survivors include an adopted son, Fred Mallon, and a brother and sister, as well as many relatives among old Washington families.

Comment Refused on Soviet Charge.

Chicago, April 9 (A.P.).—A "wild rumor, too wild for any comment," was Alexander Legge's response when told today of the publication in Pravda, official Communist organ at Moscow, of a story purporting to disclose an alleged plot against the Soviet union in which Legge and President Hoover were involved.

HOWARD LAW BODY TO AIR GRIEVANCES

Professor's Demotion and Six Resignations to Be Discussed.

Following the lead of members of the school of medicine, the Howard University Law School Association has called a special meeting "for the consideration of certain matters of vital importance affecting" the law school.

The meeting was called on the strength of a petition signed by many members of the association. It will be held in the main auditorium of the law school tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

One of the main items to be taken up is alumni resentment against what was termed, in a letter to all law graduates, the "humiliation" suffered by James C. Waters, jr., who has sustained a loss of his full professorship in the law school and is now only an instructor. The instructor, familiarly known to Howard law graduates as the "Chair," has been with the school many years, and already those in charge of recruiting support for him have received scores of letters from his old pupils commending him as a teacher and a scholar.

It was pointed out that Waters had actually been recommended for promotion by the law faculty in 1930, and that instead of being given promotion he had been demoted. A committee will be appointed also to ascertain reasons that prompted six members of the law faculty to resign.

Findings of this committee, together with the letters received from alumni praising Waters, will be presented to the board of trustees of the university when it meets next week.

Condition of King Is Held Favorable

Improvement Is Slow but Sure, Physicians Say in Statement.

Windsor, England, April 9 (A.P.).—King George is slowly but surely—apparently—recovering from the attack of subacute bronchitis from which he has been suffering for some days.

An official statement tonight said that the king continues to make slow but satisfactory progress. The slight improvement made during the last two days has been maintained, it was said, and the king is continuing to gain ground.

The insistance in well-informed circles that his majesty's return to complete recovery likely will be slow has naturally caused concern in the public mind, but to some extent this is offset by the knowledge that, although the king is confined to his room, the normal routine of the castle is being carried out.

JAPANESE PREMIER AGAIN UNDER KNIFE

Operation Is Performed as Foes Demand He Give Up His Command.

Tokyo, April 9 (A.P.).—Premier Yuko Hamaguchi, shot by a misguided patriot last November, tonight underwent his second abdominal operation within a week.

Lying on his bed, "The Lion" withheld his resignation as premier despite clamor that he quit his post because of physical disability. Five grams of pus were removed in the midnight operation. Afterward the surgeons said the premier was "doing as well as could be expected."

Some solicitude was expressed because of Hamaguchi's 61 years, his slow recovery during the five months after being shot and the operation last Sunday for removal of an abdominal obstruction caused by the shooting. His doctors, however, said he had a good chance for recovery.

Seiyukai party leaders and other political opponents continued their demand that Hamaguchi yield to some one physically able to perform the duties of premier. With surgeons preparing to operate, Hamaguchi conferred with his Minseito party leaders and was said to be clinging to the premiership only until a member of that party was selected as his successor.

The man most likely to be chosen, said the Rengo News Agency, was Reijiro Wakatsuki, formerly premier and the chief delegate to the London Naval Conference. It was Japanese opposition to the naval pact which caused Tomeo Sagoya to shoot Hamaguchi. Stoutly asserting that Japan's acceptance of smaller naval tonnage would gain international amity, the premier obtained Emperor Hirohito's ratification.

London, April 9 (A.P.).—A Reuter's News Agency dispatch from Tokyo said today there was no foundation for reports published here that Premier Hamaguchi, of Japan, had resigned.

Mr. Killeen was a native of this city. Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Mary K. Killeen; three daughters, Mrs. George D. Miller, Mrs. D. W. Bell and Mrs. Jules Ebell, and a son, John S. Killeen. He was the father of George E. Killeen, who was killed in the World War, and after whom the George E. Killeen Post of the American Legion is named.

Other survivors include two brothers, Edward V. and William P. Killeen, and three sisters, Mrs. John F. Costello, wife of the Democratic national committeeman; Margaret M. and Sue L. Killeen. Funeral arrangements had not been made last night.

Mr. Oden was painting when he fell. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital. He is believed to be suffering from a fractured skull.

PRISONERS DEMAND AUTO RIDES, MOVIES

Jailed Dry Law Violators Threaten Riots Unless They Get Privileges.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 9.—Because federal prisoners in the local jails were not permitted to take automobile rides and entertain their girls at the movies, Sheriff W. Bruce Downin revealed today that several riots have been staged in the jail during the past week.

The worst of these occurred late yesterday and it was necessary to call in a squad of local patrolmen, who entered the jail with drawn revolvers.

There had been no intimation regarding the disturbance in the jail until one of the prisoners slipped out a note to a local newspaper, warning that a more serious riot had been planned than the one yesterday unless sanitary conditions and food improves and they are given more to eat. Then the sheriff admitted there had been trouble.

Prisoners From Baltimore.

Most of the 48 Federal prisoners are from Baltimore, having been sent here to serve terms after being convicted of liquor-law violations there.

"Most of them come here with big rolls of money in their pockets and an idea they are to be entertained as guests instead of prisoners," said the sheriff. "They tell me that in other Maryland jails where Federal prisoners are sent they are at liberty during the day and evening, and are permitted to go out to movies and also to go fishing while serving their sentences.

"I've been as lenient as the law allows, permitting those who are able to bring in stoves to cook their food if they do not want to eat jail food, and some of them also have radios in their cells, while others are permitted to order their meals from restaurants.

Line Drawn on Roaming.

"But I will not permit the prisoners to roam at large at will, and that's what started the trouble. The food has been satisfactory to other prisoners, and they have not complained, nor did they participate in the riots."

The trouble yesterday started as the hostlies were serving dinner. Yells and cat calls greeted them, and pans of food along with bottles and other loose articles were thrown at those serving the meals.

When the yells had continued for two hours the police department was asked for help and, augmented by deputy sheriffs, entered the jail with drawn guns, finally quieting the prisoners. There was an omnious quiet tonight, and the sheriff has doubled his guards.

Judgments Given In Elevator Deaths

Court Allows $2,500 for Mother and $3,750 on Baby in Accident.

An echo of the accident that cost two lives in an elevator mishap, May 1, 1929, was heard in the District Supreme Court yesterday, when Justice James Proctor, following a stipulation by counsel for both sides, approved judgments of $2,500 and $3,750 without the necessity of a jury trial.

Mrs. Marie-Paula Fiot, wife of the then vice counsel of the French Embassy, was wheeling her infant son, Louis Fiot, out of an elevator in an apartment on Euclid street near Mozart street northwest, when the elevator ascended suddenly and pinned both the mother and her baby to the shaft.

Both were killed, and the suits yesterday were aimed against James Shorter Gore, owner of the building. Attorney Roland S. Robbins appeared for the estate of the infant, while Henry K. Melcher represented the estate of Mrs. Fiot. Mrs. Fiot's estate was given $2,500, and the baby's estate was given $3,750.

the last international championship. While Mr. Culbertson has world-wide distinction as an expert and teacher there are those who place some of the others on a par with him so far as men players are concerned, but there is practically universal acknowledgment that Mrs. Culbertson is without a peer among women bridge players. This is said to be true despite the fact that there are hundreds, or even thousands of expert women players, not a few of them in Washington, as the arrangements for the forthcoming tournament has disclosed.

One of the interesting features of the family bridge of the Culbertsons is the fact that Mrs. Culbertson was originally a pupil of her husband and took her first lessons from him before they were married. Now, not a few of those whose judgment of the game is of the best do not hesitate to say that Mrs. Culbertson is the stronger of the partnership.

Book Sales Stimulated.

An unmistakable evidence of the popularity of the Washington tournament is found in the fact that shops where books of instruction on bridge are sold report a marked stimulation in the demand for the works of popular authorities on the game. Likewise the teachers are being called upon in large numbers by former pupils who desire additional coaching, and by others who desire instruction, in order that they may enter the tournament with a stronger feeling of confidence in their game and their ability to make a good showing. Miss Maxie Buie, who is one of the promoters of the tournament, stated yesterday that no less than 30 of her graduates had signified a determination to enter the contest, some of them in teams, others in pairs and still others as individuals. Many of them are returning for further instruction.

The Bridge Editor of The Washington Post is in receipt of various questions affecting the rule of duplicate and law governing the play, both in contract and in auction. These will be taken up from time to time and answered in accordance with the official laws of the game, as formulated by the American Bridge League.

Renounce and Penalty.

A pertinent question which seems to be troubling some of the entrants and prospective entrants is:

"What is a renounce, and what is its penalty?"

According to the recognized authorities a renounce is a refusal to follow suit when able to do so.

A renounce becomes a revoke when the renouncing player, or his partner, whether in turn or otherwise, leads or plays to the following trick; also, when the renouncing player, or his partner claims the remaining tricks, or any of them.

A renouncing player is not penalized for revoke under these circumstances:

A renounce by dummy must be corrected if discovered before the lead to the next trick. After such lead, the renounce may not be corrected. There is no penalty in either case.

When a player refuses, any other player may ask whether he has any or none of the suit led; if he admits that he has renounced before his renounce became a revoke, he is subjected to the penalty for a renounce, but not the penalty for a revoke.

Hand Scored as Played.

If neither the trick the revoke occurred on, or any of the following tricks are taken by the revoking side there is no penalty, and the hand is scored as played.

A renounce made by any player except the dummy may be corrected by such player at any time before he or his partner has led or played to the following trick. If corrected there is no revoke penalty, but the player, if an adversary, may be required to play his highest or lowest card of the suit led. Declarer, instead of calling the highest or lowest, may treat the card played in error as exposed. Declarer may not invoke both penalties.

A declarer who has renounced may be required to play his highest or lowest of the suit led, if the adversary on his left has played after the renounce. Any player who has played after a renounce may, if the renounce be corrected, withdraw his card and substitute another without penalty. If an adversary has led to the next trick, that lead may be changed without difficulty.

MABEL WILLEBRANDT ATTACKS LIBEL SUIT

Her Attorney and Counsel for Codefendants File Demurrer to Complaint.

The suit instituted by Gus O. Nations, formerly connected with prohibition administration in St. Louis, against Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Helmar R. Baukhage, David Lawrence and the Current News Features, Inc., charging them with libel, moved a step nearer actual settlement yesterday when attorneys for the defendants filed a demurrer to an amended bill of complaint by Mr. Nations.

The original suit, brought for $200,000, was filed on August 11, 1930, and many legal maneuvers by attorneys for both sides have resulted in the prolongation of the trial.

The suit grew out of a series of newspaper articles by Mrs. Willebrandt, in which she painted a picture of Mr. Nations that he resented. He retaliated with a series of suits in several cities, and the one filed here was similar to others. In the newspaper articles Mrs. Willebrandt outlined various difficulties she had encountered as the Government's director of the war on bootleggers and their allies.

Edmund L. Jones filed the demurrer on behalf of Mrs. Willebrandt, while the firm of Mason, Spalding & McAtee represented the others. The demurrer first says that the amended declaration is bad in substance as a whole and then it specifically declares that the first, second, third and fourth counts are bad.

RUM CASE HEARINGS PUT OFF IN DANVILLE

Some of 30 Accused Claim U. S. Used Man and Wife as Agents.

Danville, Va., April 9.—Preliminary hearings today for nearly 30 men arrested by two Federal undercover agents on liquor law violation charges were continued today until April 17 by United States Commissioner C. T. Barksdale. He declined to give the names of persons arrested stating it "is contrary to the policy of the Government." He intimated that further arrests will be made.

Some of the men served with warrants in the undercover activities declared that a man and his wife were used by the Government as stool pigeons in and around Danville. More than two weeks ago the two are said to have patronized filling stations where liquor was sold.

Charges were made, however, only when undercover agents accompanied the man and his wife and, it is claimed, witnessed sales. Liquor to be used as evidence was collected at the Federal building and each bottle given a label bearing the name, time and place where it was bought.

In Henry County it is understood that more than 90 arrests have been made.

Kelly appeared for Mrs. Showalter, whose address is given as Massachusetts avenue, near Twelfth street northwest. Mr. Showalter's address was listed as I street, near Fourteenth street northwest.

You either feel GOOD or you don't

Chief Connally had both these experiences

"I FELT weak and rundown. My color showed that my blood was very pale. I suffered from poor circulation. A Pathological Laboratory made a test of my blood, and the examination showed it to be 33% below normal. It was then that I decided to take a course of S.S.S.

"In about six weeks' time, after taking S.S.S. regularly, I had another blood test made, and it showed that my blood had been restored to normal. My appetite was greatly improved; so much so, that I could eat pork, and the like, without any discomfort. And to my surprise, my skin and complexion became clear as almost new, and like a child's.

"I think S.S.S. is the most wonderful blood medicine and tonic of its kind on the market today. It has so improved my circulation and the condition of my blood that it has made me feel like a young man again, although I am 56 years old."

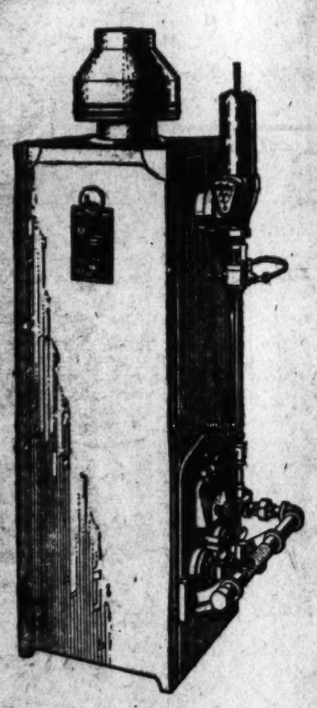
Spring Temperatures

are hard on the furnace man

When outside temperatures run gaily up and down the scale—without advance warnings—the unfortunate furnace man needs to be both a prophet and a miracle-man to keep his fire right. No wonder spring is the season for colds in so many homes.

Automatic Gas Heat, with a Bryant or a Janitrol, overcomes all that. There's no overheating one minute and being chilled to the bone the next. As rapidly as the weather changes outside, the Bryant or Janitrol automatically adjusts itself to the change and continues to hold the temperature inside the house constant. No fuel is being burned except when heat is actually needed. No wonder a house with Automatic Gas Heat is a more healthful place to live!

There's no need to put up with old-fashioned heating when you can have Automatic Gas Heat for the asking. Installation can be made in one day at your convenience. Ten per cent down and no further payments until next September. The new low house heating rate has put the luxury of Automatic Gas Heat within the reach of the average man. In the District there is a consumption charge of 60 cents a thousand cubic feet and a demand charge of $2 for each 100 cubic feet of maximum hourly demand. The combined rate works out at around 75 cents a thousand cubic feet as compared with the former rate of $1. Call National 8280 for a reliable estimate of yearly cost.



10% DOWN

Note these low terms:

You can install Automatic Gas Heat now for as little as 10% down. No further payments necessary until September 1st.

NATURE'S MILK PRESERVATIVE.

THERE is a substance in milk which preserves it for several hours. If bacteria in a pure state, or if dirt containing bacteria are added to milk, the number of these decreases for several hours. Some bacteria are affected more than others. In other words, milk is a natural germicide for a few hours' time. After this germicide period passes the bacteria that survive start increasing and they keep it up until each fifteen drops, roughly, contain many millions. The rate of this multiplication depends on the temperature at which the milk is kept and on some other factors.

This natural germicide goes by the scientific name of lactenin. It is dissolved in the skim rather than in the cream. Furthermore, it is in that part of the skim called the whey rather than in the casein. It is, therefore, not present in any considerable amount in butter, cheese, cottage cheese, or cream. It works in cold milk and also in that which is fairly warm.

It is not harmed by heating to 153 for twenty minutes; it is only partially affected by 158 for that period, and stands heat of 176 for a few seconds. It is found, therefore, in pasteurized, though not in boiled milk. Some specimens of dried milk contains it. It should be present in condensed milk and in the evaporated product. The age of the cow does not affect the amount of it contained in her milk. It is not known whether the amount of it can be changed by changing the cow's feed.

Up to the present, no way of vaccinating the cow or treating her medically or in any other way has changed the amount of lactenin in her milk. There is nothing known that points toward breeding cows that will give germproof milk. For that matter, nothing indicates that there is a way of making a milk permanently germicidal. This germicidal lactenin is entirely harmless to babies and to calves.

ULCERS ARE CURABLE.

T. Y. writes: 1. What is ulcer? 2. What causes it? 3. Is it curable? 4. Will diet cure ulcer?

REPLY.

1. I judge you mean ulcer of the stomach, though there could be ulcers in many localities in the body.
2. Nobody knows what causes stomach ulcer.
3. Yes.
4. It will, in the majority of cases. Time, patience, intelligence and persistence are required for success with the diet cure.

THEY COLLECT DIRT.

M. A. B. writes: Will plastering the hair with hair oils and dressings do harm? Have been told by a specialist that this keeps the air from entering and causes dandruff.

REPLY.

Probably not, though everything can be overdone. Fortunately, the hair does not breathe.

Of course, hair oils collect dirt and if you use them you will need to wash your scalp often.

Court Tells Watchman To Get Permit for Gun

His role as a private detective with a gun and everything proved exciting for James Pleasant, a 23-year-old Negro, who was brought into Police Court yesterday on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. He was given a suspended sentence of six months, and was told to apply for a permit to carry his pistol before carrying it any more.

Pleasant testified he had been hired as a watchman for a delicatessen store and he said he got the gun so that he could better protect the place. One policeman who knew his occupation did not bother him, but another, H. M. McQuinn, who knew nothing about Pleasant's job, took him into custody when he found the gun on him.

ew York Police Declare Robbery to Be Motive in Tipster's Killing.

ew York, April 9 (A.P.).—"There no longer a Vivian Gordon mys-y" police exulted tonight as they five men safely stowed away be-jail bars.

One of them, listed in court records burglar who developed into a racketeer, was accused as the al killer of the titian-haired wit-in the Seabury vice investiga-She was strangled with a saline and tossed from an auto-bile into Van Cortlandt Park six ks ago.

The alleged slayer, police said, is own as Harry Stein, as Harry Saum-rs, as Alexander Morse and as arles Lurim. He is a former con-t and narcotics peddler with the tincts of a slugger, detectives said, his motive was robbery. The k coat, a diamond ring and the angular wrist watch of the victim ped him, they declared.

e others, held as material wit-, are:

Samuel (Greenie) Greenhauer, tal-described as one of those men-ed in the fat diaries in which Gordon recorded the loves, fears, and adventures of a Broadway mimondaine not adverse to preying her men friends.

Morris Levine, alias "Doc," slec-lap, also said to have been named the diary. David Butterman, de-bed by authorities as a man who moved the lining from the murder tim's coat.

Blackmail Hints Set at Rest.

Jack Holdcraft, who said he was a rmer Royal Canadian mounted po-man, and former steward on an ap liner. His connection with the e was not made clear. Detectives d they found a revolver and skele-n keys in his room.

The arrest of the five men, who re taken in simultaneous coups in rious parts of the city, tended to at rest dark hints, innuendoes and wnright accusations that have set oadway agog for weeks.

The motive for the killing, high po-e officials said, was not revenge for ackmail suffered or a desire to still a tongue that threatened to wag about police and "frame-ups." It was just plain robbery, the police declared.

The Gordon murder case is the most recent of a series involving slain women. Most of them went unsolved.

Miss Gordon's attorney, J. A. Radeloff, whom she had mentioned in her diary, only recently was released on bond after being held as a material witness.

The woman's death and the ensuing revelations brought tragedy to her family. Her 16-year-old daughter, Benita Bischoff, killed herself, presumably because of shame at the notoriety that came to her mother. A brother of Miss Gordon, Pierre M. Franklin, suffered a nervous breakdown.

Bids on Western High Field Opened

Stadium Will Be Ready at Opening of Scholastic Term in Fall.

The Western High School athletic field will soon be under construction and will be ready for use at the opening of the fall scholastic term. Seven bids were opened on the project yesterday by Roland M. Brennan, chief clerk of the District Engineering Department.

Arthur L. Smith Co., of Washington, submitted an estimate of $91,980, which is well within the $95,851 available. The highest bid was $108,700. Several weeks ago bids were opened on the job but afterward rejected because all exceeded the money on hand.

The only modification of plans made before the second bids were advertised was the substitution of a wire fence for a brick wall around the field. Besides including a wood and metal steel stadium which will hold 2,000 persons, the field includes a track and, football and baseball space.

Martin Brothers was lowest of ten bidders on construction of the automobile shop at the Columbia Junior High School. The estimate was $19,-836. The highest bid was $27,900.

Absolute Divorce Is Sought by Wife

John Martin Boland, Jr., Is Accused in Petition by Mate.

A suit for absolute divorce was filed yesterday by Mrs. Lillian L. Boland from John Martin Boland, jr. The suit says that the couple was married March 20, 1926, and that Mr. Boland deserted his wife on October 1, 1930. Alleged acts of infidelity are charged.

Boland was recently acquitted by a jury in Justice Peyton Gordon's court on a charge of robbery. Boland testified, under examination by his attorney, John P. Mullen, that he had gone to an address on Longfellow street December 30 to get a refund for some "watered whisky." The sum mentioned was $14.

Boland startled the court by testifying also that his business was that of "selling whisky." Justice Gordon ordered him committed, following his acquittal on the charge of robbery, to face a charge of concealed weapon. Attorney Michael J. Colbert filed the divorce petition for Mrs. Boland.

FOUNDATION OF THE Beauty-Diet ...MILK

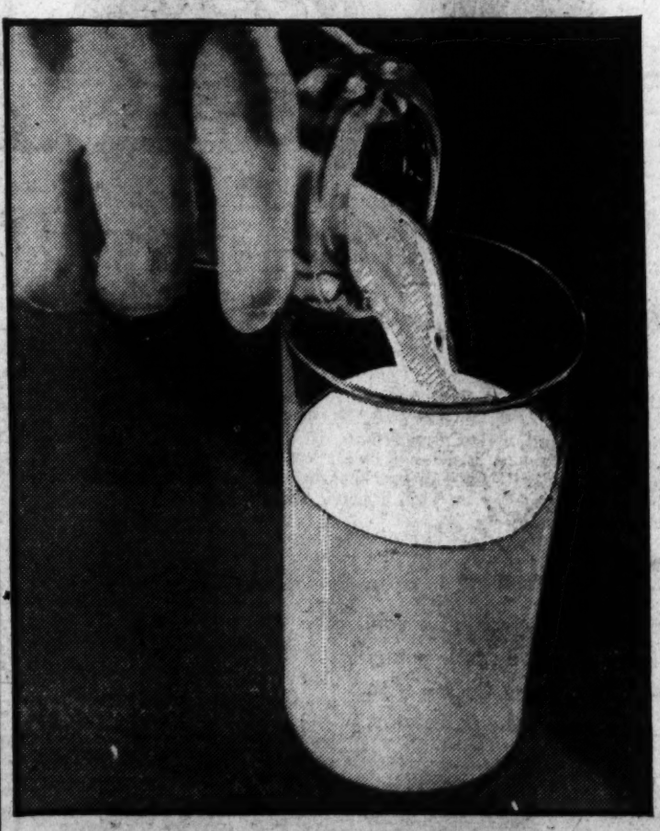
MILK is always included in the daily menu of Hollywood's foremost screen stars. Why? Because milk supplies so many of the food-elements that keep bodies young, lithe and vigorous—complexions clear—skins smooth. And among women who know most about beauty secrets, it is now recognized that milk is just as important in a reducing diet as in a diet to gain weight. For milk is nourishing—not fattening.



Just as you have your children drink milk for health and growth, drink it yourself for health and beauty. Naturally, in dieting, you will wish the supervision of your physician. . . . But, "A quart of milk a day," is the recommendation of leading doctors and beauty specialists all over the country.

Chestnut Farms Milk is extra pure, extra wholesome—richer and better. It is produced on farms where special veterinary attention is a regular safeguard . . . and from the cow to your doorstep it is spotlessly pure.

Drink Chestnut Farms Milk three times a day for a week. See how much better you feel—how much younger you look! Telephone Potomac 4000.

Corporation Counsel to Face Advising Again on Fixing Electric Rates.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride will be confronted with the task of advising the Public Utilities Commission as to its course in the electric rate controversy upon his return Monday following several weeks' recuperation and rest at Mount Alto Veterans' Hospital.

After discussing the action of the Potomac Electric Power Co. directors, members of the commission yesterday decided to submit several proposals that have been under consideration to their counsel for advice.

While the utilities body will not be bound by the opinion they receive, it is believed it will be in a more receptive mood than when it spurned the corporation counsel's advice following the public hearing on December 30.

Silent on Proposals.

The utilities commissioners declined to reveal what proposals they would submit to Mr. Bride or the trend of their discussion yesterday.

As many as four courses of action have been considered by the commission since the public hearing disclosed that the power company has been earning a 10 per cent return on its rate base since the consent decree became effective six years ago.

Should Mr. Bride adhere to his original opinion, which was so abruptly rejected when offered in January, he would advise the commission to discard the consent decree and to establish a new schedule of rates without the sanction of the court. This would shift the burden of proof on the power company. After offering this advice, however, the corporation counsel suggested that negotiations be tried with the power officials outside of court.

Proposal Comes to Naught.

This second proposal came to naught when the power company directors refused to consider any compromise measure or plan for cutting its revenue, and even denied the right of the commission to alter the consent decree or to set up any rates which do not conform strictly to the court agreement.

Previously, Richmond B. Keech, the people's counsel, urged the commission to abrogate the decree, and pointed out that the utilities law permitted it to discard the decree without asking permission of the court. A new schedule of electric rates and a new sliding scale could be established, he contended, without the agreement of the power company.

Only a few weeks ago he suggested that the commission and the power company enter into a bilateral agreement, including a sliding scale, outside the court, and thus scrap the consent decree. This plan was rejected by the power officials.

Posters on Prohibition Repeal Will Be Judged

Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Felix Mahoney and Richard S. Meryman, director of the Corcoran Art School, will judge posters submitted in a contest sponsored by the Women's organization for National Prohibition Reform, which meets in Washington next Tuesday and Wednesday for its second national conference.

Posters have been submitted in all of the 32 States where the organization has branches. A first prize of $250, second $100 and third $50 will be awarded. Mrs. Henry Leonard, chairman of the District reception committee is offering a prize of $50 for for the best poster submitted by an art student in the District, and $25 for the second. The part women will play in the repeal of the eighteenth amendment was subject in the contest.

Constitution Changes Are Explained by Page

The Constitution, in the light of modern tendencies, was discussed last night by William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives, at a meeting of the Electric League of Washington at the new building of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Mr. Page discussed the various drastic departures from the Constitution in his 50 years with the House. Merchandising of electric ranges and electric refrigerators was the subject of a business session that followed the talk.

$10,000 Suit Entered After Fatal Accident

Erskine H. Smith, administrator of the estate of Erskine V. Smith, yesterday filed a $10,000 damage suit against the W. H. Harrison Co., wholesale commission merchants.

The suit declares that on February 21 a truck of the commission company's struck a machine driven by Erskine V. Smith, at Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast, and that he sustained fatal injuries. The claim is made that the truck was not being operated in accordance with the traffic regulations.

Bank Sued for $10,000.

The negligence of the Bank of Commerce & Savings in refusing to honor a $15 check was cited by Harry Block, of 339 G street southwest, as the basis for a suit for $10,000 damages yesterday. The suit charges that the check was returned with the notation "insufficient funds" when, it is claimed, there was ample money in the account to pay the check.

Stimson and Jardine Talk Over 6,000 Miles

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Stimson held a telephone conversation yesterday with William M. Jardine, American Minister to Egypt, in Cairo, 6,000 miles away.

The minister called up the Secretary of State as part of a radio-telephone experiment, the call being relayed by a liner in the Mediterranean. The two merely exchanged greetings, much like two neighbors on the same party line. Jardine is a former Secretary of Agriculture.

MERCURY HITS 78, HIGHEST FOR YEAR

Full Cherry Blossoms Are Expected by Sunday; Pretty Days Ahead.

Spring, with summer clutching at her skirts, visited Washington yesterday, bringing the warmest day for the year with a temperature of 78 early in the afternoon, and the highest temperature for the first part of April since 1929.

The kiosk, in front of The Post Building, on Pennsylvania avenue, registered 86 shortly after noon. The normal temperature for this time of the year is 66. The highest official temperature for the year up to yesterday was 84 on January 27. On April 8, 1929, the thermometer reached 94, an all-time record in the history of the local Weather Bureau for this time of the year.

Glimpses of pink began to peep out of the cherry blossom trees around the Tidal Basin yesterday. If fair, sunny weather continues today and tomorrow the blossoms should be out in preliminary array by Sunday, it was announced by horticulturists in the office of public buildings and parks.

Slightly cloudy skies, with an embroidery of fine sunshine, is in store for today, according to the forecast at the United States Weather Bureau, and continued clear weather is predicted for tomorrow. Every indication points to Sunday being the kind of day Washington revels in—sunshine, crowds on the Speedway and the cherry blossoms in bloom.

Narrow Road Suggests Change on Connecticut

Consideration will be given to proposed elimination of the central parkway on Connecticut avenue, just south of the William Howard Taft Bridge, by the coordinating committee of District and Federal officials at its meeting April 21, Capt. E. N. Chisolm, jr., engineer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said yesterday.

The proposal has been made because of congestion of traffic in the two narrow lanes of Connecticut avenue that now skirt the parkway.

RICHMOND RESERVE GROUP MEETS TODAY

Stockholders Association Is Expected to Elect H. H. McKee.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

H. H. McKee, president of National Capital Bank and vice president of the Stockholders Association of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, is slated for election to the presidency of this association at the annual meeting at Richmond, Va., today. F. F. Beattie, president of the First National Bank of Greenville, S. C., a former Washingtonian, is president of the association, and President Floyd E. Davis, Lincoln National Bank, and Cashier J. Frank White, National Bank of Washington, are members of its advisory committee.

Edward P. Colladay, of this city; John M. Miller, jr., Richmond; Gov. George J. Seay, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, and Mr. Beattie are the speakers at today's meeting. Among those who expect to attend from here are Gov. Eugene Meyer, of the Federal Reserve System; Members Charles S. Hamlin and George R. James, of the Federal Reserve Board; Vice President and Cashier George O. Vass, Riggs National Bank; President John Poole and Vice President Wilmer J. Waller, Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., and Mr. McKee.

End of Decline Reached.

Trade and industry became somewhat more active the past month and with allowance for usual seasonal tendencies, general business activity has held at a practically constant level since the beginning of the year, the current issue of the American Bankers Association Journal says in its business review.

"There is a growing confidente that the period of decline lasting eighteen months came to an end last December and that the next important move will be upward," the Journal says. "So far there is evidence of no material expansion in production and sales, save in isolated cases, as, for example, cotton goods. Nevertheless, the basic industries such as automobiles, steel, building and a sizable list of lesser industries are showing slow but definite gains.

"If general business activity should hold at around its present level for the remainder of the year, every month would bring a narrowing of the spread as compared with the corresponding record of the previous year, while if a moderate upturn should develop, the declining trend of 1930 would be quickly surpassed. It is generally admitted that the recovery back to theoretical normal is not likely to be achieved this year, although many economists are now beginning to question whether the normal as calculated in the commonly used indexes of business is not too high. Possibly the unusual expansion during the period 1915-1930 has given the so-called normal rate of growth too sharp an upward curve, in which case the indexes will have to be readjusted downward to conform to the slower rate of growth that prevailed up to the time of the war."

Shepherd in New Post.

Thomas J. Mangan, jr., manager of the Washington office of Hemphill, Noyes & Co., announces the acquisition by their stock department of Henry Shepherd. Mr. Shepherd is well known in the Washington financial district, having been associated with stock exchange offices for the past several years. He is a native of Shepherdstown, W. Va., and has been making his home in Washington for the past ten years.

A talking motion picture on Corporate Trust Shares will be presented at the Willard Hotel this afternoon at 4 o'clock by A. P. Osteen, field executive of Ross, Beason & Co., Inc. The picture is a new development in the merchandising of securities.

Riggs Bank Club will hold its annual spring dance at the Willard Hotel, April 11.

Mary Carroll and Dee Shannon, well-known local radio artists, were the entertainers at the banquet of the Washington office of Investors Syndicate at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday evening.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, April 9 (A.P.).—Big export buying of North American wheat, upward of 2,000,000 bushels, lifted grain prices today, but active profit-taking sales wiped out the advance. Moisture scarcity Northwest and duststorms both north and south of the Canadian boundary had a noticeable bullish influence. An opposite factor was a correct surmise in various quarters that the Government crop report due after the close would prove bearish.

Compared with the average of latest private estimates, the Government report on domestic winter wheat condition indicated a yield 25,000,000 bushels larger than expected.

Wheat closed firm, unchanged to ½c higher; corn, unchanged to ¾@1½c up; oats, ¼@¾c advanced, and provisions, unchanged to 5 cents off.

Renewal of broad demand from overseas for North American wheat made itself felt throughout the day and was simultaneous with news of a decided shrinkage of Russian shipments. It was announced that exports from Russia in the last week were only 80,000 bushels, against Black Sea total shipments of 1,104,000 the week previous and 1,168,000 a year ago. Further significance was attached to word that European purchases of North American wheat included some wheat from the United States, and that a quantity of No. 1 hard from this country had been bought in Liverpool at 69½ cents a bushel.

Helping to strengthen the wheat market was notice taken of an official statement that stocks of wheat in all United States markets were diminishing, and that the question of grain shortage was not a serious one. Dry conditions prevailing in the spring wheat belt tended strongly at times to stimulate buying, especially as a forecast of overnight rains had failed. Numerous indications that insect pests would be a factor to be reckoned with this season continued also to attract attention.

Corn and oats averaged higher with wheat and were bullishly affected also by scantiness of corn receipts. Corn primary arrivals were only about one-third as large as a year ago.

Provisions were steadied by an upturn in hog values.

WALL STREET NEWS BRIEFS

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—A New York and Chicago banking syndicate is offering an $8,000,000 issue of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. 6 per cent preferred stock at 101½. Proceeds will reimburse the company for expenditures made in connection with acquisition of new properties.

There is a growing confidence that the period of decline in business came to an end last December and that the next important move will be upward, the American Bankers Association Journal says in its current business review. Trade and industry became somewhat more active in March, the review says, and with allowance for usual seasonal tendencies, general business activity has held at a practically constant level since the beginning of the year.

An increase of 102 per cent in the sales of oil burners for domestic and industrial use for the first quarter is reported by the Petroleum Heat & Power Co. increased interest in industrial fields, especially in the East, as evidenced by the doubling of sales during the first quarter, is taken by the company as an indication of returning stability in production.

Youngstown advices have it that evidence is slowly accumulating that automobile steel specifications placed with valley mills may show an increase within the next few weeks. The past two weeks have been a comparatively dull period in sheet buying, but in the current week that encouraging industrial news that exists in the valley is found with sheet manufacturers, particularly those whose chief outlet is the automobile industry. The Carnegie Steel Co. will relight a blast furnace at the Mingo works, at Mingo Junction, Ohio, last of this week, placing all three stacks at that plant in blast.

Stockholders of Burns Bros. today approved a plan proposed by the management providing for the sale of $9,000,000 of 5 per cent notes and reduction in the stated value of the class A common stock to $60 a share from $100, and in the class B common stock to $10 from $40. The plan was proposed to provide a satisfactory working surplus. When the directors announced approval of the issue early last month it was said arrangements had been made for private sale of the notes at par for cash, subject to approval of the stockholders.

Private cable advices report a sharp reduction in tin ore output in the Federated Malay States last month. Total production for March was 5,461 tons, a decline of 1,009 tons from February, and 989 tons less than January output. March output represented a curtailment of about 22 per cent from the 1929 average production.

New financing for the Potomac Edison Co. will take the form of an issue of $5,000,000 first mortgage gold bonds, series F, 4½ per cent, due 1961. The issue has been underwritten for public offering by W. C. Langley & Co. and Bonbright & Co.

Stockholders of St. Joseph Lead Co. have approved an issue of $10,000,000 convertible bonds, which would bear 5½ per cent interest and mature in ten years. The bonds will be offered to stockholders of record April 20 in the ration of $100 per value of bonds for each 20 shares held. They have been offered at 97½ and have been underwritten by J. P. Morgan & Co.

Cigarettes in prime condition have a moisture content of about 10%. It will be seen by the Chart that cigarettes in the ordinary wrapped package lose more than half of their total moisture in thirty days and that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition

Remove carefully the Humidor Pack from a package of Camels and fill it with water. If you have not injured the seal at the corner you will note that it holds the water perfectly without leaking.

Now make the same test with the ordinary Cellophane or glassine wrapping found on other brands. See how quickly the water seeps through and escapes.

All is not moisture-proof Cellophane that glitters

DO NOT be misled by a mere shiny wrapper. The Camel Humidor Pack should never be confused with either the glassine or the ordinary Cellophane wrapping sometimes found on other cigarettes.

Our Humidor Pack is made of moisture-proof Cellophane, which costs nearly twice as much as ordinary Cellophane and is air-sealed at every point.

It is not put there merely to catch the eye but to perform a real service to the Camel smoker.

Because it is both air-sealed and moisture-proof, it keeps Camels always in mild, factory prime condition. It also guards the cigarettes within from contamination by dust or dangerous germs.

As you light a Camel fresh from the Humidor Pack, note how mild and cool and easy it is to your throat. Compare its fragrant mildness with the bite and burn that comes from the smoke of a stale or dried out cigarette.

Everywhere today people are talking about the new delight they have found in this blend of choicest Turkish and mellowest Domestic tobaccos.

Remember, Camels are the only cigarettes in the true Humidor Pack.

RAIL SELLING HALTS BRIEF STOCK RALLY

Carriers Suffer Heaviest Losses, but List Closes Generally Lower.

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—A quiet little rally in the main body of stocks was interrupted by selling of the railroad equities today. Weakness in that group, particularly during the last hour, induced professionals who had been supporting industrials and utilities to sidetrack their efforts, and closing prices were lower all around. Volume remained small—only 1,900,000 shares.

The conspicuous losses were in the rails, many of which went to new lows for the year or longer on declines of 1 to 7 points. Such stocks as U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Bethlehem and Radio were down about a point; General Motors, General Electric, Westinghouse, Anaconda and Union Carbide closed firm. Half a dozen specialties, including Warner Bros., Wrigley, Beechnut, Beatrice Creamery and Bohn Aluminum, were moderately strong to the end.

Position Is Disquieting.

Reappearance of liquidation and short selling in most of the country's leading carrier shares was disquieting in view of the effect which such weakness frequently has on the general market. The reasons were probably to be found in the discouraging February earnings statistics, the recent drop in loadings after a period of improvement, possibility of further dividend reductions and the realization that railroad incomes are normally among the last to respond to business recovery.

New York Central went through its December minimum and was off 3¼ net. Rock Island and Illinois Central were down as much, while Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific preferred, Norfolk & Western and Atchison lost 5 to 6. The break in Union Pacific and Frisco preferred amounted to 7 points.

New Haven and Southern Pacific dropped 4 and Pennsylvania, Southern Railway and Baltimore & Ohio 1 to 2.

Many Constructive Items.

The recommendation of the oil States' advisory committee for coordination of conservation was received passively by stocks of the petroleum companies which have long been awaiting the development of an acceptable and workable plan to help the industry out of its troubles. The market heard some encouraging reports concerning automobile production and the gain in February motor car exports was of course favorable. Bradstreet's announcement that March building permits attained the largest monthly total since last September, as well as firmer quotations on silver and copper, were other items on the constructive side of the ledger.

For the first time in months the statement of the Bank of France revealed a net loss of gold, amounting to 20,000,000 francs. Additions to the bank's stores have been decreasing in recent weeks but not until today did the turn in the tide indicate that France was supplying the precious metal rather than taking it from other countries. The central banks of both England and Germany showed gains in their gold holdings.

Credit Conditions Unchanged.

Credit conditions were unchanged, except that there was a livelier demand for banking acceptances, chiefly from the West. Bonds moved higher for a time, but the improvement flattened out before the close.

Grain markets awaited the Government crop condition statement, which placed the indicated winter wheat production about 100,000,000 bushels above the five-year average for 1925-29 and 40,000,000 bushels over the final 1930 output. Wheat futures at Chicago finished virtually unchanged and corn was equally steady. Cotton lost about half of a maximum gain of $1 a bale.

Foreign exchanges were dull. The French franc eased enough to put it at a new 1931 low, while the Spanish peseta topped the previous year's high. Sterling was firm.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—Recent declines were followed by rather sharp rallies in cotton in the early trading today, with July contracts selling up to 10.58 on trade buying and covering promoted by the firmer showing of Liverpool and talk of an improved technical position. This made a net advance of 20 points which seemed to attract rather freer offerings and prices later reacted partially under realizing or liquidation. March closed at 10.46, with the general market closing barely steady at net advances of 6 to 10 points.

The opening was steady, 7 to 8 points higher, in response to the relatively firm showing of Liverpool and buying by houses with Liverpool connections. There was some further liquidation and a little Southern selling, but the offerings were readily absorbed and active months sold 17 to 21 points net higher before the end of the morning. May advanced to 10.34 and October to 10.90, but the more urgent demand appeared to have been supplied at these prices and the buying tapered off after the close of Liverpool. No fresh news factor developed, apparently, but the market worked gradually lower during the afternoon, with May closing at 10.21 and October at 10.78, or about 10 to 13 points off from the high level of the morning.

The early feature was the buying here by houses with Liverpool connections, following the advance in the Liverpool market. This was supposed to be on the differences. May liquidation continued with considerable selling of that position against sales of later months and switching from old to new crop deliveries. Spot houses were credited with buying May against sales of July or October. A private report was published regarding acreage intentions which pointed to a decrease of 9.8 per cent, which was slightly above the report of last week, forecasting a reduction of 8.4 per cent.

Liverpool cables reported continental liquidation absorbed by Bombay buying in that market with a cessation of selling pressure. Egyptian futures in Alexandria were 4 to 28 points lower, while the Indian spot quotation in Liverpool was 3 points higher. Exports today, 13,600, making 5,791,788 so far this season. Port receipts, 12,350. United States port stocks, 3,843,050.

BOND MARKET GAINS SHADED AT CLOSING

Day Ends With Prices Irregular but Higher; Utilities Are Active.

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—The bond market struggled to attain higher levels today and did so for a time, but a settling tendency toward the close of the trading canceled many of the gains. The market as a whole ended the day narrowly and irregularly higher.

Among domestic issues the railroad issues were a focus of attention. The more active issues of this group moved ahead briskly during the first half of the trading session, but by the closing bell a reversal of trend had carried a few rail obligations to new low levels for this year. The series F and I 5s and the general 4s of the Missouri Pacific were so affected. Such varied obligations as Atchison General 4s, St. Paul adjustment 5s, Rock Island 4s of 1934, both issues of Erie Refunding and Improvement 5s, and St. Louis, San Francisco 4½s of 1978 closed firm or higher after active trading.

Public utility obligations were active as a group and provided a few surprises. Abitibi Power 5s slumped 7¼ points to close at a new low at 65½. The shares of this utility weakened also. Issues of the Manhattan Elevated Railway and of Interborough continued to advance, making sharp net gains and reaching new high levels. Net changes in most of this group were more moderate and most of them were gains.

Brazilian issues continued to advance, but the action of other Latin-American obligations was irregular. German 5½s strived to rise early in the day and continued strong to the close. This strength stimulated other German issues. The recent semi-official announcement that the bank for international settlements would pay a 6 per cent dividend from its first year of operations possibly aided these sympathetically. United States Government obligations eased off on a moderate volume.

G. U. Defeats Princeton In Ninth

Poole Outlasts Four Rival Hurlers; 13 Hits by G. U.

By JACK ESPEY.

GEORGETOWN finally opened its home ball season after six postponements yesterday with an 8-to-7 victory over Princeton on the Georgetown Prep field at Garrett Park, Md. About 250 persons made the 7-mile journey to watch the first collegiate diamond clash of the season in this vicinity.

The enforced idleness of the athletes due to inclement weather of the past two weeks sent them into the game rather unprepared, and the contest developed little good baseball. The hitting, however, was better than could be expected in view of the players' lack of practice.

Georgetown won out in the ninth inning when Walter Morris, the Washington-bred shortstop, lifted a Texas League single to right field to score Catcher Larry O'Toole from third base. One was out at the time and O'Toole had reached third on a single, an error by Muldaur, Princeton second baseman, and a base on balls.

Evers' Error Allows Princeton to Tie.

The decision would have been recorded a half inning earlier had the Hoyas not let down on defense. Through some faulty work of O'Toole and Left Fielder Johnny Evers, jr., the Tigers were virtually presented a run that tied the score at 7-7 in the first of the last inning.

With two out, Borja singled to center for Princeton and went to second when O'Toole dropped a pitch. Then Morse knocked a fly plump into Evers' glove but Evers failed to hold it and Borja easily counted from second base.

Such fielding support was not merited by Harold Poole, Georgetown's big right-hander, who had shown some clever pitching in the earlier frames. But he stuck to his task and recorded the final out against the Tigers by snatching Purnell's grasser.

Poole bested four Princeton pitchers. He yielded ten hits, but kept them well scattered except in the eighth, when his foes jumped on his curves for four runs. The feature of this Princeton splurge was Purnell's home to deep left with Morse on base.

Georgetown Pounds Ray Out of Box.

Georgetown blasted Ray out of the box in the fifth inning and proved troublesome to Moles and Wilson, who, in that order, took up the burden after Shorty Bauman, a human skyscraper, relieved Ray for one and one-third innings.

Bauman held the Hoyas hitless during his brief appearance. He might have lasted until the finish had he not tired himself running the bases. He rifled a certain home run to the farthest reaches of center field in the seventh inning, but forgot to touch first base and saw his effort wasted.

Thirteen hits were amassed by the home club with Capt. John Scalzi and Phil Mooney each making three. Hitting honors for the invading team were captured by Holmes (Trix) Bennett, who got "four for four." Bennett injured his knee rounding first base in the eighth and had to retire.

Harry Hooper, one of the major league outfield stars of ten years ago, appeared as coach of the Tigers and served in that capacity throughout the game from a position on the bench. Under a rule of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, of which Princeton is a member, coaches are barred from the bench during a game.

Simmons Signs Terms Reported at $30,000

Philadelphia, April 9 (A.P.).—Connie Mack's ball players now are all signed up and the world's champions are ready to go.

Announcement was made late today that Al Simmons, batting champion of the American League and star outfielder, had affixed his signature to an athletic contract, the last player to agree to terms for the coming season.

Neither Mack nor Simmons would say what the terms were. It was reported around Shibe Park that the contract was for one year at $30,000.

Simmons, who did not go South with the Athletics but spent seven weeks at Hot Springs, Ark., working out with George Earnshaw, pitching ace, was not classed as a real holdout. He worked out last year at Hot Springs and did not sign his contract until the opening day of the season.

Simmons and Earnshaw arrived in Philadelphia early today and this afternoon both were in uniform at Shibe Park.

Manager Bill McKechnie's Boston Braves will be the first to face the powerful bats of the Brooklyn Robins in the 1931 National League campaign. The two teams open the National League season at Boston April 14. "Lefty" O'Doul, former Philadelphia outfielder, is being depended upon by Manager Robinson for a large part of the Brooklyn offense this year, while Wally Berger is the big gun of the Braves' attack.

DUNLAP WINS PINEHURST MATCH

Homans, Defending His Title, Beaten in North-South.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 9 (A.P.).—Under a summer-like sun, George T. Dunlap, jr., New York golfer and intercollegiate champion, continued his winning stride in the thirty-first annual North and South amateur tournament here today, but the defending champion, Eugene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., fell by the wayside.

Dunlap, the medalist, won his quarter-finals match on the thirteenth hole, eliminating Howard Tryon, Elmira, N. Y., 7 and 5. The college champion, playing under the colors of Princeton, was out in 35, one under par. He and the Elmira golfer halved the first hole with birdie 3s, and Dunlap sank a 30 putt on the fourth after being trapped to win it with a par three and got another birdie 3 on the ninth.

Comnig in, the Princeton representative shot par on the first three holes and ended the match by collecting a birdie 3 on the thirteenth.

Tailer Rallies to Win.

Homans, who won the 1930 tournament, was one down to T. Suffern Tailer, Newport, R. I., at the turn, but the Rhode Islander showed a more consistent brand of golf on the back nine to win 5 and 4. The title holder was somewhat wild off the tees, and on several greens his putting was erratic. He lost the fourteenth when Tailer laid him a stymie. The Newport entry had a medal of 72, one over par, for the round. Homans' medal score was 76.

J. B. Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., who came to Pinehurst with a string of titles acquired in Florida winter tournaments, defeated Richard S. Tufts, of Pinehurst, 3 and 1. The pair was all square at the turn, but birdies on the ninth and twelfth enabled Ryerson to win. He had a medal of 74, to 77 for Tufts.

Forbes K. Wilson, of York Harbor, Me., was four down to S. M. Parks, of Pittsburgh, at the turn, and six down on the thirteenth, but the former, a Yale golfer braced to win the next three holes. The seventeenth was halved to end the match. Parks went out in 35. Wilson's putting was costly to him. He three-putted three of the first nine greens.

Col. Ruppert Recoverin From Bronchitis Attack

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees basebal team, tonight was rapidly recovering from an attack of bronchitis that had kept him bedfast for several days.

At his home it was said tonight that Col. Ruppert would remain indoors for several days, but probably would attend the opening game of the American League season at the Yankee Statdium Tuesday.

Cuyler and Dykes Guard Titles as Targets at Plate

Players Who Led Leagues in Being Hit Most Last Year Admit It Is Painful Way to Get on Base.

By HENRY McLEMORE.

NEW YORK, April 9 (U.P.).—Being cracked on the head, arm, or even the leg with a zooming baseball doesn't come under the definition of fun, good, clean or otherwise, and you would think that those players who led the two major leagues in being hit by pitched balls last season would be only too glad to relinquish their titles.

But you reckon without the spirit of a true champion—the old go-down-swingin', good-to-the-last-drop, die-with-my-boots-on spirit. So Kiki Cuyler of the Cubs, who was nicked eleven times, and Jimmy Dykes of the Athletics, who was nicked ten times, will start the season determined to hold their crowns.

Cuyler Confident Of Holding Title.

Curious to know what preparations each had made for the defense of their honors we sent a couple of wires.

"Well," answered Kiki, "I am confident of holding my title. I have picked up several pounds during the winter and offer a more substantial target than I did last year. Furthermore, I know more about the art of getting hit than I did in 1930 when I was no more than a novice.

"Of course, I don't care to get cracked on the head. My head is reasonably hard and plenty willing to give its all, but when a fast ball, like Vance's, say, comes steaming down the road the wise head will get out of the way. This getting hit is quite a smart racket. It's better to take one on the hip, say, and get to first base than it is to stick up there at the plate and take a chance on striking or flying out.

"Naturally, I don't want to get hit too ooften, for that would handicap my base running. I led in stolen bases last season and hope to do so again."

Dykes, several years older than Cuyler, wears his honors more lightly and is inclined to be a trifle philosophic about the whole thing. Jimmy intimates he thinks more about getting on first than any glory he might accrue from leading the league.

Helps a Fellow in Batting Slump.

"I guess I'll get socked a lot this season," he says, "but I don't care. I'm used to it. I might say it's an effective, though painful, way of getting on base. It certainly comes in handy when a fellow is in a batting slump.

"In my early days as a 'target' it was all rather painful, and I once thought of asking permission to wear some sort of armor, a mattress or several pillows, say. You know I can't do much nimble footwork for I was built for comfort, not speed."

Incidentally, the greatest "target" of them all was Hughie Jennings. In 1896 Jenings, then a member of the Baltimore Orioles, was hit no less than 49 times.

Phil Scott to Attempt Prize Ring Comeback

London, April 9 (A.P.).—Phil Scott, retired British heavyweight, has decided to take another fling at prize-fighting. He accepted terms today for a 15-round bout with Larry Gaines, Toronto, Ontario, Negro boxer, and Canadian heavyweight champion, at the Leicester Stadium, June 13.

Lott and Sutter Win In Texas Tournament

Houston, Tex., April 9 (U.P.).—George Lott, of Philadelphia, advanced to the semifinal round of the River Oaks invitation tennis tournament heretoday, defeating Fred Royer, of Dallas, 4—6, 6—1 and 6—0.

Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, beat Jake Hess, of Houston, 6—3, 6—1. The Houston player was no match for Sutter's style of play and experience.

Bruce Barnes, of Texas University, defeated Junior Coen, of Kansas City, 7—5, 7—9, 6—3.

Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Calif., defeated Herbert Quic, Dallas, 6—3, 6—1.

John Warren to Fight As Pro at Charlotte

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 9.—John Warren, veteran North Carolina U. heavyweight boxer, will enter the ranks of professional pugilists in Charlotte, N. C., Monday night when he is scheduled to meet Ross Rowsey in an eight-round semifinal bout to the Add Warren-Jack Parker fight. John has completed his eligibility period here at Carolina and plans to engage in a bit of professional fighting this spring and summer.

His opponent in the Monday night fray is a West Virginian who has been campaigning around Charlotte with great success lately. He turned in victories in his last three fights there.

Warren, following in the footsteps of his brother, Add, who is a former captain of the Tarheel boxers, made an enviable record while at Carolina. During the season just past, John won seven of his eight scheduled bouts and had the other forfeited to him.

FISHBURNE CADETS WIN.

Special to The Washington Post.

Waynesboro, Va., April 9.—Fishburne Military School's baseball nine opened its season in midseason form here this afternoon and piled up a 21-to-0 score against Randolph-Macon Academy, of Front Royal. In the second inning, Fishburne registered eleven runs on seven hits and five passes. Branaman and Glover smashed out circuit clouts in the sixth and fourth frames, respectively. The visitors were held to two safe blows by the four twirlers who worked for Fishburne.

D. C. BOY MAY PLAY

Phelps Hand, former Central High baseball player, and the son of the Rev. and Mrs. E. Phelps Hand, of this city, is a likely choice for an outfielder's berth on the Ohio Wesleyan University diamond team, according to an announcement from the school yesterday.

Hand is a junior and played in the outfield last year. Ohio Wesleyan plays its first game tomorrow, engaging Ohio State at Delaware, Ohio.

Allison, Shields and Wood Named on Davis Cup Team

NEW YORK, April 9 (U.P.).—The United States officially began its campaign for the recapture of the Davis Cup today by appointing the team that will meet Mexico in the first of the North American zone matches at Mexico City May 1.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex.; Frank Shields, of New York, and Sidney Wood, a student at the University of Arizona, were the players named to form the United States team. J. B. Adoue, jr., a member of the executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, will act as nonplaying captain.

It will mark the first Davis Cup competition for Shields and Woods. Shields, ranking No. 2 player, recently turned in the only victories won by this country in the indoor tennis matches with France. He won singles matches from Jean Borotra and Christian Boussus.

Wood, 19-year-old sensation, who won four major tournaments last year—his first of competition—is looked upon as one of the coming stars and is ranked by Vincent Richards as the best tennis prospect the United States has had in years.

Allison, although still comparatively young, is a veteran of Davis Cup play. He teamed with Johnny Van

Chisox Errors Help Giants to Win in Eleventh, 7-6.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 9 (A.P.).—With Babe Ruth adding his second homer in two days to the festivities, the Yankees slaughtered Asheville, 17 to 4, today in the third and final game of their series. The victory gave the Yanks a clean sweep.

Ruth's fourth homer of the year came in the second inning with Lary on base. Charlie Ruffing and John Allen divided mound duty for the winners, limiting Asheville to six hits, while four local flingers were pounded early and often.

Robins' 6-Run Rally Wins Game.

Macon, Ga., April 9 (A.P.).—Putting on one of their typical ninth-inning rallies to score six runs, the Brooklyn Robins downed the Hartford Senators of the Eastern League, 12 to 8, in the final of their five-game series today. That made it three out of five for Uncle Robbie's sluggers.

Giants Nose Out Chisox in 10th.

Charlotte, N. C., April 9 (A.P.).—The Giants were forced to rally in the last of the eleventh to nose out the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 6, today and break a four-game losing streak. The win likewise enabled them to take a lead in the barnstorming tour, with seven victories to six for the Sox.

Poor fielding by the Hose, combined with hits by Leslie, Critz and Lindstrom, provided the Giants with the winning runs in the second extra inning after the Sox had forged ahead in their half. Fred Fitzsimmons, ace hurler for the Giants last year, toiled ten innings for the winners, with Chaplin finishing.

Orsatti's Homer Wins For Cards.

Memphis, Tenn., April 9 (A.P.).—Ernie Osatti's home-run drive in the seventh inning enabled the Cardinals to win from the Memphis Chicks, 2-1, here today in the wind-up game of the Red Birds' training trip.

Jim Bottomley's double and Orsatti's wallop were made off Walter Beck, a former Browns' pitcher.

Columbus, Ohio, April 9 (A.P.).—The Boston Red Sox made it three in a row here today by defeating Columbus, of the American Association, 10 to 4, in the final game of an exhibition series. Percy Lee Jones and Johnny Brillheart hooked up in a pitchers' battle for the first six innings with the latter having the edge. Jones retired after the sixth, while Brillheart was driven from the mound in the eighth.

Browns Have Won 14 Games.

Wichita, Kans., April 9 (A.P.).—The Browns' spring training schedule was closed with a washout today when rain prevented the final game here with Wichita. Fourteen victories in twenty games is the record of Manager Bill Killefer's Club, the line-up of which even the manager says he does not know.

Killefer has used virtually two teams in recent contests and a lot of the athletes are uncertain as to whether they are regulars or bench warmers.

Bridges, Tigers, Wins Over Pirates.

Decatur, Ill., April 9 (A.P.).—Rain marred a pitching duel between Tommy Bridges, Detroit Tiger recruit, and Larry French, Pittsburgh left-hander, here today. The Tigers finally emerged victorious, 6-4. Only one run, made by the Tigers, crossed the plate during the first six innings. The Tigers fell on Bednar, Pirate relief pitcher, for two runs in the seventh and three more in the eighth, when Stone hit a homer after Alexander had doubled to score Harvey Walker. The Pirates rallied in the ninth to score four runs off Sullivan after two were out.

The Tigers have won five of the seven games played with the Pirates on the West Coast and en route home.

Tris Rookies Star In 1-0 Victory.

Birmingham, Ala., April 9 (A.P.).—Clint Brown and Roxie Lawson, yearling members of the Cleveland Indians' pitching staff, won a superb hurling duel from three Birmingham moundsmen here today, 1-0. The Barons got all three of their hits off Brown in five innings, but, by keeping them scoreless, he ran his consecutive blank innings to nineteen. The Indians got their run in the third off Piue, Burnett walking and scoring on singles by Seeds and Morgan. Birmingham won the other game of their series yesterday.

FINE CHANCE, OPINION OF JOHNSON

Says Nats Must Beat A's and Yanks; Has Faith in Veterans.

(This is the fourth of a series of stories on major league prospects written for the Associated Press by the club managers.)

(Manager, Washington Nats.)

I THINK we have a good chance.

Philadelphia and New York are the clubs we will have to beat, but I doubt whether the Yankees will have the pitching to make the grade. All our players are in fine shape, particularly the pitchers. Although we have not been hitting much thus far, I am confident the boys will find their batting eyes by the time the season opens.

Our older players, such as Sam Jones, Joe Judge and Sam Rice, look fine this season and ought to have a good year. If they falter for any cause we have competent replacements, something we did not possess last year. Barring accidents we ought to be at the top or very close to it when the campaign ends.

By BURT SHOTTON
(Manager, Philadelphia Nationals.)

I do not care to forecast where the Philadelphia team will finish this season, but I am confident we have an improved ball club.

Our infield is better, with Bartell and Friberg around the middle bag, and our outfield is considerably better defensively and should pack as much punch as last year. With Klein in there, we have one of the most dangerous hitting outfields in the big leagues.

If Phil Collins signs up and joins the team in good condition our pitching will be much better than last year, and even if he doesn't I feel this year's staff will make a much better showing than the one of 1930.

Obscure Pro Leads British Golf Tourney

London, April 9 (A.P.).—A little-known professional from the Leatherhead Club, Surrey, Arthur Perry, who learned his golf at the knee of James Braid, today led sixteen of Great Britain's ranking professionals through the qualifying stages of the Roehampton invitation tournament.

Perry carded two sparkling rounds of 68 to post a 36-hole total of 136 and top C. H. Gadd, another little-known professional, by one stroke.

Qualifying with Perry and Gadd for match play, which begins tomorrow, were Abe Mitchell, also with 137; R. A. Whitcombe and Fred Robson, with 138; Aubrey Boomer and C. A. Whitcombe with 140s; George Oke, 141, and H. C. Kinch and Mark Seymour with 142. Seven players tied at 143 and must play off tomorrow for the six places.

Henry Cotton, George Duncan and Archie Compston were among the well known golfers who fell outside the charmed circle.

LISKA SEEKS CURE FOR ARM

Will Visti Bonesetter; Baltimore Host to Nats Today.

ADOLPH LISKA, the National's subway ball hurler, reports that his salary wing is getting no better fast and the club has just about decided to send him to Youngstown for some treatments by "Bone setter" Reese. Liska has had a sore arm practically since he reported at the Biloxi training camp, and no one has been able to diagnose just what is wrong.

It was at first thought that Liska's trouble, a sore muscle in the back of his right shoulder, was caused from infected teeth, but this guess has proved to be wrong and the trip to the Ohio "miracle man" is contemplated, although no definite decision has been reached.

According to the player, he suffered a similar handicap back in 1927, when he was with Des Moines, this being the cause of his release by that club. He then was picked up by the Lincoln Club and a physician there cured him almost overnight by snapping one of his back muscles back in place. Liska is confident that Reese can do the same thing, as he believes that his present trouble is a duplication of the one he had four years ago.

Altrock Takes Treatment.

"Uncle Nick" Altrock, coach and comedian, it might be mentioned, now is at Youngstown for some of the famous bonesetter's treatments. The old-timer tore several of the muscles in his left arm while grabbing for the side of a boat from which he fell on a fishing trip just before he was ordered to the training camp.

Outfielder Tom Clark, brother of Earl, of the Boston Braves, has been sent to Hagerstown, of the Middle Atlantic League, on option, President Clark Griffith announced last night. Two other National rookies also will be left with that club, which is training in Baltimore, when the Nats go to the Monumental City for a game with the Orioles this afternoon. The pair—Infielder Charley Montague, a protege of Joe Cronin, and Pitcher Joe Smith—has been purchased and no strings were kept on them.

Johnson to Rest 3 Regulars.

Manager Walter Johnson is leaving three of his regulars behind when he takes his Nationals to Baltimore today for a resumption of hostilities following the breaking of training camps of the two teams. Sam Rice, Joe Judge and Heinie Manush will be left behind, which means that Harry Rice, Dave Harris and Joey Kubel will get a chance to see what they can do.

Satisfied that his pitchers are ready for the season to start, Johnson used two against the Phillies yesterday and he will do the same thing against Vik, Notre Dame End, Signs As Assistant Coach at C. U.

GEORGGE VLK, veteran of four years' service with Notre Dame's football team, and regular end on the last two creations of Knute Rockne's grid genius, has been signed as end coach of the Catholic University gridmen, now engaged in spring practice at Brookland, and will arrive in Washington tomorrow to take up his duties.

Vik swells the Cardinal coaching staff to five, with Head Coach Arthur J. Bergman, and Assistant Coaches Gross, Gagnon and LaFond. LaFond will remain in charge of the freshmen.

Vik, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, will graduate in June with the degrees of A.B. He is 22 years old and has been aiding Rockne in the South Bend school's spring practice until the tragic death of the great coach. He is the possessor of two Notre Dame monograms, for 1929 and 1930.

The last letter which Rockne wrote to Coach Bergman of Catholic University strongly recommended Vik for the open berth at the Catholic institution. Bergman stated last night. Vik was considered by Rockne as one of his greatest ends.

Vik will remain at Catholic University for three weeks, the duration of spring practice at the Brookland school.

Spencer Hero, Driving Home Four Runs

Crowder and Hadley Halt Big Guns of A's Conquerors.

Nats Score 2 in First and Follow With 5 in Second.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

BERT SHOTTON'S Phillies, Quaker City champions by virtue of having clinched the title in their spring series with the world champion Athletics, were not so effective against the Nationals at Griffith Stadium yesterday afternoon, being beaten handily, 10 to 5, before a small gathering of about 1,200. The vaunted batting punch which the Phils are known to pack was evident only in flashes as "General" Alvin Crowder and Irving Hadley held them in check throughout.

The Phils outhit the Nationals, 12 to 10, but four of these safeties came in the ninth when Hadley was coasting along under a big lead and was putting little or nothing on the ball. While the Washington aces were doing their bit the Phillie moundsmen were having more than their share of troubles. Four divided the work, three left-handers—Johnny Mulligan, Ben Shields and Stewart Bolen—and "Slim" Fallenstine, who uses his right arm.

West Contributes Fielding Feature.

Roy Spencer was the National's hitting hero. Although he was credited with two hits, the same number cracked out by Sam Rice, Hayes and Manush, both of his drives were doubles and each scored a pair of mates. Sammy West, as usual, contributed the fielding feature, the little center fielder speeding almost to the stands in left center to make an over-the-shoulder grab of a liner from Whitney's bat which was labeled "extra baser."

Whitney put the Phils in the lead in the second inning when he opened with a home-run drive into the left-field stands, and this was the only time the Nats were behind. They retaliated with a two-run stand in their half of the same round and then fol-

PORTAM NEVER HEADED IN BOWIE JUVENILE STAKE

Pink, Choice, Tires, Runs Third

McTaggart Gets Son of The Porter Away From Gate Fast.

Happy Scot, With 126 Pounds Up, Second to Barrido.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Bowie Kindergarten, attracting the best of the crop of 2-year-olds at the Prince Georges track, yesterday resulted in an easy romp for Charles L. Eisenhardt's Portam, chestnut son of The Porter—Amaryllis, and this was the second race he had won in two starts. The Middleburg Stable's Marcasite, also a winner at Bowie, was second, and the flashing filly, Pink, that had won the Nursery Stakes at Miami, third.

One of the largest crowds of the meeting was out, invited by clear skies and warm weather. Among the visitors was James F. O'Hara, builder, with Gadsden Bryan, of this plant, that always has attracted a large patronage. This was Mr. O'Hara's first visit since 1929, when he was stricken with illness and compelled to retire from active affairs.

Public Makes Pink Favorite.

The public made the filly, Pink, favorite among the twelve starters in the Kindergarten. Her owners, the Tennessee Stable, sent the unbeaten Vander Pool to the post a year ago, and he won the race going away, and the visitors expected another victory from this stable with Pink. Portam was second choice, and, ridden by one of the best jockeys for baby racers, J. McTaggart, was away like a whirlwind, and none could catch him. McTaggart believes that nine points in success with 2-year-olds are gained in getting them away from the post. Semester was next away and was going well, but was overhauled at the quarter by Pink. Marcasite was closing fast in the stretch, while Pink showed symptoms of tiring, and at the sixteenth the Middleburg's filly, Marcasite, caught her. Portam was safe and finished three lengths to the good. Marcasite was a length and a quarter in front of Pink and Semester was fourth. The time was 0:48 3-5. The winner paid $9.10 and earned $1,960 of the $2,500 added money. Portam was purchased at the sales for $2,600 and has won $2,810 in his two races.

Coltiletti Wins With Wise Councillor.

Jockey Frank Coltiletti celebrated his return to Maryland racing by scoring an easy victory on F. Spatola's Wise Count, a first starter, a large bay colt by Wise Councillor. The victory was so easy that all Coltiletti had to do was to keep the colt under wraps. Society Talk was second, beaten three lengths. Six lengths back—nine lengths behind the winner, Tarquin was third. The Middleburg-Zeigler entry finished fourth and fifth. Wise Count was backed from 5 to 1 down to less than 2 to 1, paying $5.60. Time, 0:49 1-5.

Mrs. Olive Curtis' Sporting Blood colt, Bob Shannon, showing improved form suddenly, won the second race, going away. Otto Torrell's Star Lassie was second, and Mrs. R. E. Chapman's Calgary Kay third. Ima Queen, favorite, which set a fast pace, was passed by the three horses at the turn into the stretch. The winner paid $27.60. Time, 1:29 3-5. J. Renick had the mount on the winner. Fourteen horses started for the seven furlongs. The winner had a margin of two lengths.

William Zeigler, jr.'s Barrido proved best in the Magnolia Handicap, third race. Admiral Grayson's Happy Scot, on his first race of the year, failed to get up, with 126 pounds, but made a game effort and was second. Reproof was third and Noajoyce was fourth in a six-horse field. Happy Scot, a candidate for the Preakness and Derby, was attempting to concede 16 pounds to Barrido, a natural sprinter, in a 5½ furlong race. Barrido, George Ellis up, led all the way, and was timed in 1:08 2-5. Happy Scot was away from the gate third, and after disposing of Noajoyce, attempted to catch the leader. Barrido paid $15.40.

Buddy Basil Repeats In Fifth.

J. L. O'Neal's Buddy Basil repeated by winning the fifth race, with Frogate up, and paid what appeared to be a very long price for him, $21.70. He was held in restraint behind the pacemaker, Era, but moved up front in the stretch for race margin of a neck. Era held the place with Double O third. He was timed in 1:49 4-5, a mile and a sixteenth, showing the track was quite slow.

Remillard evened the score with Robertson in the sixth race, winning with Luck Piece. Luck Piece had a length advantage of Shark and My Davy was third. Luck Piece was under mild restraint in the early running.

Otilla, far back in the early running, moved up on the outside to win the seventh race, with W. Day in the saddle. Tang finished second and Royal Charge third. The winner paid $7.60, and won by a length and a half.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE COUNT, $5.60, $4.60, $3.60; SOCIETY TALK, $9.50, $6.10; TARQUIN, $3.40.

WISE COUNT raced as if much the best. A rapid beginner he drew out into a commanding lead the first three furlongs and was eased up steadily in the stretch run. SOCIETY TALK, a forward contender all the way, easily shook off the others under pressure the last furlong. TARQUIN broke alertly and raced forwardly the entire trip. He finished gamely under punishment when it came to a drive and outlasted FLYING at the end. The latter, prominent rounding the turn, was pinched back entering the stretch. She continued to close stoutly under pressure and would have been third in a few more strides. GENERAL COURT and HABANERO raced greenly, but finished fast. MULLER was crowded back when the start came and was not persevered with the final quarter mile.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. O. Curtis' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOB SHANNON, $27.40, $9.20, $6.20; STAR LASSIE, $6.40, $3.80; CALGARY KAY, $3.60.

BOB SHANNON slipped through on the inside in the run down the back stretch and raced IMA QUEEN into defeat around the turn, opened up a winning lead thereafter, but was smartly urged to maintain his lead. STAR LASSIE broke in a tangle. She gradually improved her position on the outside to finish going strongly. CALGARY KAY, buffeted about the early stages, was taken around the leaders the last half mile and steadily improved his position and shook off IMA QUEEN the final fifty yards. The latter, quickest to set going, displayed good early speed, but weakened after going five furlongs and swerved to the inside in the stretch run. POLY was bothered at the furlong pole.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400. The Magnolia Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:36½. Off at 3:37. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARRIDO, $15.40, $3.80, $2.70; HAPPY SCOT, $2.60, $2.30; REPROOF, $3.10.

BARRIDO, under strong pressure, raced NOAJOYCE into defeat the first half mile and drew steadily clear in the stretch run and had nothing to spare at the finish. HAPPY SCOT, taken back repeatedly and weaving in between the leaders entering the stretch, shook them off in the furlong pole, but then, tired under weak handling. REPROOF, racing next to the inner rail on the path the entire trip, outgamed NOAJOYCE in the last stride. NOAJOYCE, used up forcing the early pace, faltered in the stretch run. BEST ACE closed stoutly. PORTCODINE had no mishaps.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Bowie Kindergarten. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:10. Winner, C. J. Eisenhart's ch. c., by The Porter—Amaryllis. Trained by C. Reilly. Value to winner, $1,960; second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PORTAM, $9.10, $5.80, $3.00; MARCASITE (entry), $5.00, $2.80; PINK, $2.80.

PORTAM, quick to find his stride, displayed keen speed and, shaking off PINK in the stretch run, held MARCASITE safe under mild pressure at the end. MARCASITE moved up steadily when straightened out in the stretch and made a game effort, but could not overtake the leader. PINK, away forwardly, raced in close attendance of the leader while on the outside rounding the turn. She slipped through on the path entering the stretch and held on well to the final sixteenth, but then tired. SEMESTER, forced back when the break came, saved ground all the way and finished stoutly. EJUAYBE and CAPACITY raced well. SURF BATHER was crowded back immediately after the start. LORRAINE S. suffered interference the first sixteenth. ZONDA broke into the air.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, ridden out. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:45. Winner, J. L. O'Neal's ch. h. (5), by Basil—Eris. Trained by S. N. Heiman. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUDDY BASIL, $21.50, $7.30, $5.80; ERA, $4.90, $3.50; DOUBLE O, $9.40.

BUDDY BASIL, forced back in the run to the first turn, went around the leaders when straightened out in the back stretch and, gradually working his way forwardly, finished determinedly under punishment and outlasted ERA in the final drive. ERA outbroke the field. He was rated in front and shook off repeated bids from his opposition the early stages, but could not withstand the winner's challenge. DOUBLE O, close up the entire trip, weakened in the last quarter mile, but responded well under punishment to outlast GENIAL HOST in the closing strides. The latter, rated off the pace until midway around the lower turn, gained steadily and would have been third in a few more strides. STUPENDOUS and RUANE could never get up.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:18½. Winner, T. Flippen's b. g. (5), by Rouleau—Bit o' Luck. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:50, 1:15 2-5, 1:45, 1:59 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCK PIECE, $6.30, $3.30, $2.50; SHARK, $4.50, $3.10; MY DAVY, $3.60.

LUCK PIECE, taken back going to the first turn, was waited with until midway around the lower turn before being called upon. He gradually improved his position on the outside and, closing gamely through the stretch, wore the leaders down to win going away. SHARK raced well up under light restraint. He took command through the stretch, but then faltered when the final test came. MY DAVY displayed speed, but dropped back on the stretch turn. He found the path on the inside through the stretch and came again and shook off BILL SETH in the last sixteenth. MY SCOOP opened up a big lead, but weakened after going six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 5:51. Off at 5:51½. Winner, L. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OTILLA, $7.60, $4.00, $3.00; TANG, $7.40, $5.10; ROYAL CHARGE, $4.50.

OTILLA, away forwardly, was taken under restraint for six furlongs, moved up on outside on last arc, taking command entering stretch to win under mild urging. TANG flashed usual early speed and hung on better than usual, despite pressure from INTREPID in run down back stretch. ROYAL CHARGE closed strongly when called on and had no excuses. MOON PHASE, in close quarters leaving half-mile pole, ran evenly thereafter. INTREPID showed speed for seven furlongs, but weakened when real issue came. VOLTMETER showed early speed.

Carrollton, Ky., April 11 (A.P.).—How fast a fox can run has been determined by Elmer and Estil Murray, of Owenston, who ran down a large gray fox near here with their car. The fox darted out from the side of the road and raced the car until it attained 45 miles an hour.

WORKMAN'S CHOICES BEATEN

Jockey Visits Bowie and Makes Bets on Seven Losers.

Special to The Washington Post.

BOWIE, Md., April 9.—Raymond Workman, chief rider for C. V. Whitney, and the highest priced jockey in the country, was at Bowie today and was rapidly improving from his injury in Florida, when a horse fell with him, breaking his ankle. Workman said he would ride Equipoise in the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace, but would accept no mounts until the second week there.

He has been exercising horses, and is relied on to win the Preakness and Kentucky Derby with Equipoise. Incidentally, Workman bet on seven losers at Bowie today. That shows how hard they are on the bad track.

Willis Shea's Sandy Ford, winner of the Dixie last spring at Pimlico, suffered cuts in the Century here yesterday, which may keep him out of the $5,000 Prince Georges (spring) Handicap on Saturday.

Mixed Tex and Jubilation have been placed on the schooling list.

Uncle Jim Arthur, who has been ill at his home in Baltimore, was well enough to take in today's sport.

F. Spatola's Wise Count, a starter in today's opener, must be a fair sort of colt judging by the rush to get the mount on him. Every veteran on the ground wanted to ride the son of Wise Counselor—Grace Troxler. Just how he performed can be noted in the charts published elsewhere in this paper.

Frank Kearns who has a division of J. P. White's stable here, received word that the two English 2-year-olds that Owner White purchased last winter arrived yesterday in New York. One is a colt by Beresford, the other a colt by Blue Ensign.

The apprentice allowance was waived on Shark in today's sixth race and the gelding carried 115 pounds.

Jockey Danny McAuliffe stopped off on his way from Columbia, S. C., to New York. He reports that the W. S. Kilmer band, which wintered in South Carolina, left there yesterday for Havre de Grace.

The handle in the "iron men" yesterday was $465,880, proving that the fans still like the brand of racing offered by the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association.

Horsemen quartered at Havre de Grace inform me that there are two of the E. M. Waite stall gates at the Harford County course ready for use on Monday. They contain fifteen stalls each and are similar to the one to be used at Belmont Park, N. Y., this summer.

Bill Brennan, assistant to Trainer James Rowe, jr., brought six 2-year-olds and four older horses to Havre de Grace yesterday for the Greentree Stable.

The B. B. Stable plans to convert Col. Crump into a steeplechaser this season.

According to Harry Williams, editor of the Racing Form, there are 45,000 live thoroughbred horses on this side of the Atlantic. No wonder it is impossible to cut out the cheaper claiming races.

Clyde Phillips, who handles the W. J. Zeigler, jr., stable, states that there are 45 brood mares at Zeigler's Burrland Farm at Middleburg, Va. They are in charge of Maj. Foster. In addition, they have foaled thirteen fillies and one colt so far this season. Polydor, a former sprint king, has been bred to 18 of the mares.

The Dougherty-Lancaster Detective Agency, of Baltimore, has been engaged to help protect the Havre de Grace track, which opens its spring meeting on Monday.

Fred Crist was an arrival from New Orleans in search of fresh racing material.

Trainer J. P. Sammy Smith shipped some of the Dorwood Stable's horses to Jamaica this morning.

William Shewbridge, of Baltimore, will ship his stable of six horses to Havre de Grace on Saturday.

Dame Rumor has it that the Maryland Jockey Club, which conducts the racing at Pimlico, is looking to a falling off in its pari-mutuel play and will slash the salaries of its employes.

Gibson Island Club Plans Cruiser Race

Plans for the annual cruising race of the Gibson Island Club, to be sailed Saturday, September 5, were announced yesterday by J. Rulon Miller, jr., chairman of the yachting committee of the club.

The contest is open to cruising and sailing yachts not exceeding 75 feet overall, either auxiliary or otherwise. They must be owned by recognized yacht club members. Motors in the auxiliaries will not be sealed, but the use of the engine after the preparatory gun sounds will indicate the yacht's withdrawal from the race.

Crews shall be made up of at least three persons, with the master an amateur. The course measures about 100 miles.

MIDDLEBURG HUNT RACE SATURDAY

Special to The Washington Post.

MIDDLEBURG, Va., April 9.—Thirty-five horses making up 40 entries are listed for the three races scheduled for the eleventh annual spring race meet of the Middleburg Hunt Club to be held Saturday on the estate of D. C. Sands, master of the Middleburg Hunt Club, near Middleburg. These comprise some of the best timber toppers from leading stables in the East. Many are heroes of hard-fought battles.

The feature event is the running of the Middleburg Hunt Cup, a four-mile cross-country race over timber. There are ten entries in this race, among them being Sea Soldier, of Millcreek Stables, the Man o' War gelding that made such a gallant bid for the famous Middleburg Cup last year, racing to the finish with his hide ripped open from breast bone almost to flank, the result of an injury suffered in coming over the next to the last jump. Boissons, winner of many races, now in the stables of Skinner Bros., Middleburg, is also among the entries.

Loudoun Plate Draws 17 Entries.

The Loudoun Plate, a two-mile steeplechase over brush jumps, has seventeen entries, and the Rose Hill, for half-breds and thoroughbreds, has thirteen entries.

The course has been improved. New jumps, all timber, have been constructed with the stone walls leveled or built over. Old barriers have been torn away and replaced with unyielding timbers stoutly put together.

A record-breaking crowd is expected this year. Followers of the sport from many States will be present to get a line on the racers, as well as throngs of society folk from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Richmond and other nearby sections.

Admission will be charged this year for the benefit of the Loudoun County Hospital.

Meet Managers Named.

Managing the meet will be A. S. Craven, Howard Bruce, Plunkett Stewart and William du Pont, stewards; G. Basil Hall, Max Hirsch and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, judges; Thomas Rodrock, paddock judge and clerk of scales, and William Skinker, starter.

The names of the entries, owners and riders, respectively, for the Middleburg Hunt Cup follow: No Esteem, P. Bontecou, owner and rider; Drummer Boy, Mrs. T. H. Sommerville, Noel Laing; Scotch Mist, J. E. Johnston and F. W. Gillett, Bowes Bond; Boissons, Flying Horse Farm, Jack Skinner; Serallo, Mrs. J. H. Whitney, William H. Street; Sea Soldier, Millcreek Stables, J. Davis; So Dear, Miss Katherine Woodward, H. Duffey; Gouys, W. C. Seipp, L. C. Leith; Skipper Gray, Old Mill Farm, rider unnamed; Van Deusen, B. O. F. ARGENTINE BOXER DIES.

Buenos Aires, April 9 (A.P.).—Julio Mocorda, one of the most popular boxers in South America, died today of injuries received in an automobile accident. He was a lightweight, standing second in popular favor to Justo Suarez, the spectacular youngster who defeated several good lightweights in a New York campaign last year.

Polylith Picked to Beat Fillies in Bowie Feature

Durva Rated Serious Contender; Berber Named in Fifth.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Blossom Purse, for 3-year-old fillies, is the best race on the Bowie program today, although the Highway, fifth number, has the larger purse. This being the day before the close of the spring meeting at this trick, the chief interest is in the Prince Georges, $5,000 added, to feature the final card tomorrow. Over Sunday the horses will be shifted to Havre deGrace and Jamaica, where they probably will meet a better grade of racers.

The best 2-year-old developed at this meeting is Portam, winner of the Kindergarten yesterday, and he may not stand up at Havre de Grace, where the large Eastern stables have sent their best.

In the Blossom are seven fillies that should be at their best. W. C. Trover's POLYLITH is picked to win, and she will not be the favorite. She has started three times at this meeting, but has been outclassed. In this event she is meeting more nearly fillies of her own class. When she ran third to Your Flag recently it was her best race, and improvement has been shown at each start. DURVA is a dangerous contender. While her victory over King Boggen was due to an accident, her other winning race was also a good effort. MORHEART should improve and is rated third. Her Agua Caliente form was splendid. Peace Dove, the $100 beauty which paid $108 for $2 Wednesday, also is in the race, but she seems outclassed and takes up weight.

FIRST RACE—This is for 2-year-olds. ROYAL AL is selected to beat BILL MORA on information that he has been working very fast. BILL MORA has been left at the post and scratched several times, but may live up to his works. LAMPONO will give them an argument, for he has really shown something by running second to Jalpur.

SECOND RACE—PRINCETON is best in the second race, but is not altogether reliable. He won his last two races in the South, eating good horses. He should, on that form, never leave this race in doubt. But they are running crazily on this track. The track should be almost fast by post time. HIGH SCORE looks like a contender. He had good form at New Orleans. Wicker is best of the others, unless GILDED ARCH, at the bottom of the eligible list, should get in.

THIRD RACE—COCKRILL is expected to beat NEGODOLE, three times winner at this meeting, in the third, because of the drying out track. COCKRILL won his last, beating Workless. But NOGADALE is dangerous and should be the contender. TEWSENELDA has much early speed and should get in the money.

FIFTH RACE—BERBER is selected to beat LAHOR in the Highway, because he gets his distance, a mile and a sixteenth. They have been running him in short races, which can only be regarded as conditioning efforts. He was a good horse at Bowie last fall. LAHOR will be the contender. He beat Come On the other day. BUD CHARLTON can not be overlooked. He tired last out.

SIXTH RACE—TALENTED PRINCE should defeat KEN KLING. He was a good one at Miami, and has worked well here. KEN KLING should be the contender, on the race in which he beat Airliner. SAN PRESTO is pounds the best of the others. He can do better than his last start.

SEVENTH RACE—LADY BIENVILLE is selected for the seventh race, and will be at long odds. Most any of her

MARYLAND OPENS HOME SEASON IN DOUBLE BILL

Old Line Nine To Oppose Carolina

Shipley Plans to Use Batson and Hauver on Mound.

Georgetown May Play Boston College's Nine Today.

A COLLEGE baseball double header, something of a rarity in this section, will be held today at College Park when Maryland engages North Carolina. The first of the two clashes is scheduled to begin at 2:30 o'clock.

This marks the opening of Maryland's home campaign and the two contests offer the Old Line team a chance to climb in the ratings of the Tri-State League of the Southern Conference.

Thus far Maryland has won two and lost one in the league. These games were played week before last in the South. All told, Maryland's record shows two losses, the second having been suffered at the hands of Georgia, which is in the Dixie League, of the Southern Conference.

Shipley to Use Best Pitchers.

Jack Batson and Otts Hauver probably will be called on to do most of Maryland's pitching today. This pair ranks one-two on Coach Shipley's slab staff and is believed to be in fine fettle. Nothing is known here of Carolina's strength.

Another college game also may be played if negotiations opened yesterday between Georgetown and Boston College are consummated. Georgetown authorities wired the Hub team yesterday in Philadelphia, where the Eagles met Villanova, seeking to arrange a game for this afternoon on the Georgetown Pred diamond at Garrett Park. An answer from the Eagles is expected this morning.

Harry Noznesky will toe the mound for Georgetown if the plans materialize. This burly left-hander lost his first start of the season to Washington and Lee but he is said to have rounded into impressive form since that date. Last year, Noznesky was unbeaten during his initial campaign in varsity college ranks.

Colrick Not Pleased With Team.

Although Princeton was defeated, Coach Colrick was not in a pleasant mood when his Georgetown charges left the Garrett Park field yesterday. The Hilltoppers were guilty of poor base running and various mental errors for which Colrick saw no excuse whatsoever. He was particularly displeased over several instances of getting signals confused and handed out sharp reprimands.

Maryland had a game scheduled with Harvard for tomorrow but this has been postponed until next Friday. It will be played at College Park. Should today's double assignment work ill on the Old Line pitching staff the Harvard shift will prove a boon.

Harvard Nine Starts Southern Trip Sunday

Cambridge, Mass., April 9 (U.P.).—Harvard's varsity baseball team will leave here Sunday afternoon for its six-game schedule with Southern colleges, it was announced tonight.

The Crimson nine is scheduled to meet William and Mary College at Williamsburg, Va., on Monday.

Other games on the Southern card include: University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, Va., Tuesday; United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Md., Wednesday; Georgetown University, at Georgetown, Thursday; University of Maryland, at Baltimore, Friday, and University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, Saturday.

ALLISON, SHIELDS, WOOD ON CUP TEAM

Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., in 1929 to win the doubles match from Jean Borotra and Henri Cochet, of France, in the challenge round.

The same players who will compete against Mexico probably will represent the United States in the zone matches against Canada at Montreal, May 21, 22 and 23. If successful against Canada the same men are expected to carry on against the South American winner at Washington, D. C.

Should the United Statse reach the challenge round against France, however, there probably will be some change in the personnel of the team. Shields and Woods probably will continue as the singles players, with Allison also likley to be nominated.

In the doubles Johnny Van Ryn is expected to team up with either George Lott, of Chicago, or Allison. Lott and Van Ryn will sail May 1 for France, where they will represent the United States in the French championships at Paris, May 17 to 31.

lowed with a five-run splurge which, to all intents and purposes, sewed up the game.

Rice Starts Rally With Double.

The "big inning" saw the Nats get plenty of help from their foes. Sam Rice opened with a double and Hayes immediately singled him to third. Manush's fly was deep enough in left to permit Rice to score after the catch and Cronin then contributed a single on the hit-and-run. When Judge walked the aisles were packed and West hit a hot grasser to Hurst. He pegged to the plate and Rense dropped the ball, Cronin also scoring before it could be retrieved. When Bluege walked the runways were crowded again and Spencer, who had doubled two home in the second, gave an encore, driving down the left-field line for two sacks. Milligan then fanned Crowder and Rice, but the damage had been done by that time.

Over the balance of the route, the Phils scored four more runs and the Nats three, but these had nothing to do with the result. Mallon and Hurst led the alien attack with three hits each, while Chuck Klien, making his debut following a long hold-out argument, was credited with two, as also was Arlett, former Coast sensation, who played right field.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

A LADY'S allowance for her own personal expenditure is popularly known today as pin-money. For quite a time after the invention of pins in the fourteenth century they were so expensive that only the very wealthy ladies could afford to buy them. It became the custom to give a certain sum of money to women at their marriage for the sole purpose of buying pins. At that time, the makers of pins were allowed to sell their wares only on the first and second of January, and on those dates women flocked to the stores provided with their allowances, which were thereafter termed pin-money.

In order to make smoke go down instead of up simply light the open end of a transparent cellophane cigar wrapper. The tube must be sealed except for the end that is burning. The smoke will continue to go down into the tube until it has completely burned.

RALLY BEATS VIRGINIA, 9 TO 2

Generals Score 6 Runs in Eighth to Win in Tristate Game.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 9. Scoring eight runs in the last two frames, Washington and Lee defeated Virginia here today, 9 to 2. It was the third victory for the Generals in the Tri-State League, they having previously won from North Carolina and Carolina State.

Fletcher, Washington youth, held the Lexingtonians to four hits up until the eighth, when six hits, following an error by Lee netted six many runs. Townsend finished the game for the Cavaliers.

Leigh Williams, four-letter man at Washington and Lee yielded but five hits, two of them scratch, and contributed a circuit smash in the third inning, the only run registered by his team until the crash came in the eighth.

Fitzgerald, first sacker for the Generals, led with the stick, getting four singles, and in the fatal eighth Gross contributed a timely double.

Navy Baseball Team Plays Fordham Today

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 9.—Navy's baseball team, twice slapped, will furnish the feature attraction on Saturday's home sports program. Nosed out by Lehigh and soundly trounced by Pennsylvania, the tossers will face a crack Fordham University outfit, beginning at 2:15 o'clock. However, major interest will follow the national championship St. John's lacrosse team to Baltimore, where it faces the brilliant Mount Washington Club Team, in the Baltimore Stadium.

Both the champion Johnnies, seeking their third consecutive title, and the Gray Wolf Pack have been under fire, and one of the season's outstanding clashes should result.

The Navy lacrosse team will make its debut at home, clasing with the Terrors of Western Maryland College. The Middie twelve, with many new faces in the starting line-up, will oppose a team of unknown quality in the Westminsterites.

Western Maryland had a rugged aggregation last year, but so far has not threatened Maryland's big four, St. John's, Navy, Maryland and Hopkins, who seldom lose except to each other. As Navy's team is green, an interesting tussle may result.

Notre Dame Resumes Spring Football Drills

South Bend, Ind., April 9 (A.P.).—Voluntary spring football practice will be resumed tomorrow afternon at Notre Dame under the direction of Coaches Heartley (Hunk) Anderson, and Jack Chevigny, assistants to the late Knute Rockne.

The suggestion was made that spring football practice be concelled, but Mrs. Rockne and school officials were of the opinion that the late Notre Dame leader would have wanted things to go on as in the past. They also believe that starting practice will have a better psychological effect on the players than leaving them idle.

Practice wil continue to the end of the month, making a total of less than six weeks' work. Several football stars are working with the track and baseball teams.

MARYLAND U. CUBS WIN IN DEBUT

Hyattsville Defeated, 12 to 6, in Seven-Inning Game.

MARYLAND'S freshmen opened their baseball season yesterday afternoon at College Park, handily defeating Hyattsville High, 12 to 6. The Old Liners got away their advantage throughout. The contest was called after seven innings by agreement.

Maryland used three hurlers, all of whom worked well. Hyattsville emhit rather freely.

ployed a pair of pitchers, both being The Old Liners counted four runs in the first inning, added one in the second, pushed across three more in the fourth and wound up by scoring four markers in the sixth, their last turn at the tee. The county lads rang up three tallies each in the fourth and seventh frames.

Donnie Bartoo, shortstop, former Hyattsville captain, led Maryland at bat with three singles in four times at bat. He also stole three bases and accepted both his fielding chances without a slip. Babe Anderson, with two safeties in three attempts, was most consistent on attack for Hyattsville.

V. M. I. ROUTS TIGER NINE BY 11-0

Noble, Shomo Hold Hampden-Sidney to Three Hits.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 9.—The Virginia Military Institute routed the Tigers of Hampden-Sydney on Alumni Field today by the score of 11 to . The Cadets played errorless ball and made eleven hits. The Tigers were unable to count on three scattered hits.

Many errors marred the Tigers' game. In the fifth, V. M. I., with Laughorn's two-bagger and three singles, aided by two errors of the shortstop, pushed five men across the plate. Noble started on the mound for the Keydets and struck out the first three men up. He allowed one hit in the next five innings, and then was relieved, followed by Shomo, who permitted no damage by the visitors.

Crawley Pounded Out in Sixth.

Crawley, of the Tigers, was sent to the showers in the sixth after the disastrous fifth, followed by Humphreys, who held the Keydets to three more runs. The Cadets completely outplayed their rivals and Hafferty's charges seem to be in form for their two Tristate League games the first of next week.

LISKA SEEKS CURE FOR AILING ARM

the Orioles this afternoon, having Lloyd Brown and Wally Tauscher divide the work. Brown is slated to draw the opening-game assignment against the Athletics in next Tuesday's inaugural and today's game will be used as his final competitive workout before "business" begins.

Onslow Visits Capital.

Jack Onslow, coach with the Nationals in 1928, was here yesterday with the Phillies. He is a mighty good man to have around, being especially good in the coaching and training of young pitchers. Burt Shotton has some nice things to say about his work this spring.

Stewart Bolen, who was the third pitcher used by the Phils yesterday, is the player which the Quaker Citys ans drafted from Baltimore last fall in preference to the veteran, Joe Hauser, baseball's home-run king of 1930. Bolen, a left-hander, won nineteen games with the Orioles and appears to be a first-class flinger.

TRACK TEST TODAY FOR EASTERN

Kelley's Squad Meets Episcopal; Tech Nine Drills.

EASTERN HIGH'S track team, undisputed champions in local scholastic ranks, engage Episcopal High's outfit of track and field men today at Alexandria in the opening outdoor engagement of the season. Two practice baseball games, participated in by Eastern and Tech, and Gonzaga's game with Swavely, at Manassas, complete a day's activities which does not lend itself to convenient walking distance for the local followers of high school sports.

Eastern will tackle Episcopal "cold" for want of practice, but Coach Kelley assumes that the Virginians are in about the same fix. Kelley will take along a squad of 25 and is looking for a victory, but only after a Episcopal handily the last two seasons, but the meets were a bit later in the year.

As usual, Eastern will depend largely on Slye and Everett, star hurdlers, and possibly on Tony Palmer, Kelley's newly reactivate sprinter, to bring home the pointage.

Tech Stages First Real Practice.

Tech's baseball team held its first real practice of the season yesterday on the Monument Grounds, and Coach Mal Edwards made up for lost time by drilling his squad for four hours. The same thing will be on the books today. A six-inning intra-team game was played and it is possible today that a full nine-inning game will be on the score books.

Eastern will practice again this morning and stage an intra-team game. The high school champs are practically in midseason form, and no fate awaits them except another breeze through local competition.

Western and Business are taking things easy, while Gonzaga has been training more assiduously than all the teams put together, due mostly to the fact that its diamond, the Terminal field, has been in shape to play upon almost every day during the rainy season.

Eastern's tennis match with Episcopal yesterday was postponed until the middle of next week.

Richmond-Owned Dog Winner in Field Trials

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 9.—Some 200 or more dog-loving sportsmen watched the tenth running of the spring trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club, held four miles southeast of Warrenton today.

Eighteen dogs competed for the trophies in the puppy class. The judges, Ernest Mead, of Richmond, and Harry B. Mitchell, of Herndon, awarded the first prize in this class to Misty Lem, owned by J. W. King, of Richmond. Second place went to Black Bonnie, the property of C. D. Richardson, of Weedonville, Va., and third prize to Annapolitan, owned by Dr. W. H. Hopkins, of Annapolis, Md.

Twelve dogs fought it out in the novice for all age class. First went to Trumps Sam Valliant, belonging to Ford E. Young, of Washington. The judges picked Ginger Ghost, the property of C. D. Richardson, for second, and Marshall King's Carolina Zerk, from Fredericksburg, took the third.

Eight handsome trophies went to the various winners, there being two prizes for the winner in each class. Ideal spring weather prevailed. The wooded knoll, from where the entire range could be seen, was crowded throughout the day. According to visiting dog owners, this was one of the most successful trials in the history of the club.

Recent rains made the ground just right for trials and the balmy spring day proved most comfortable to the spectators.

Sons Seek Letters In $392,297 Estate

Ottenberg Heirs Claim Mother Died Recently Without Leaving Will.

Louis and Joseph Ottenberg, sons of the late Mrs. Regina Ottenberg, who died March 25, yesterday filed a petition for letters of administration on her estate. The petition shows that so far as is known Mrs. Ottenberg left no will.

Her death followed by a month the death of her husband, who had long owned and operated a bakery on Seventh street northwest. Four sons and two daughters survive her.

The petition shows that Mrs. Ottenberg owned three large apartment houses and several smaller properties, valued at $142,297. She had personal property valued at $200,000, most of which was made up of mortgage bonds. There is also $50,000 in stocks and $6,000 in cash. The other children are Henry Ottenberg, of San Francisco; Abraham, of Detroit; Samuel, of 1915 Sixteenth street northwest; Mrs. Jennie O. Berliner, of 1474 Chapin street northwest, and Mrs. Bertha O. Pressler, of 4217 Sixteenth street northwest.

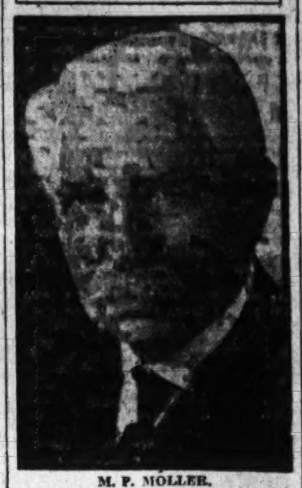
DINNER GUEST



M. P. MOLLER.

HAGERSTOWN FETES BUILDER OF ORGANS

M. P. Moller Is Honor Guest at Banquet Celebrating Fiftieth Anniversary.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 9.—Hagerstown and the State of Maryland celebrated tonight through their authorized official industrial and social representatives the fiftieth anniversary of the Moller Organ Works, the world's largest, by tendering a banquet to M. P. Moller, the firm's founder.

Three hundred guests from all over the country gathered at the Hotel Dagmar. Judge Frank G. Wagaman was toastmaster. Among the speakers were Mayor Reuben Musey, Representative David Lewis, Representative John B. Ferguson, president of the chamber of commerce; Omar T. Kaylor, former State's attorney; Dr. Henry W. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College; Dr. G. Maurice Smith, president of Susquehanna University; the Rev. G. E. Harms and representatives of the American Guild of Organists and the National Association of Organists.

City and State representatives expressed thanks to the guest of honor for his contribution to the development and enrichment of Hagerstown and told of the debt of gratitude owed to him by the State of Maryland.

Building Huge Organ.

Hagerstown, Md., April 9 (A.P.).—While preparations were under way for the dinner marking the fiftieth anniversary of the Moller Organ Works, one of the largest organs in the world, a product of the local industry, was under construction and installation in the Philadelphia Municipal Auditorium.

The anniversary banquet also commemorates the founding of the automobile company and the music store owned by M. P. Moller.

The latter, a native of Denmark, was thrown on his own resources when a boy of 14 and emigrated to America in 1870. In 1875, he built his first pipe organ, which was installed in the Swedish Lutheran Church in Warren, Pa.

His factory was first located at Greencastle, Pa., but following an exhibition of a large instrument he built at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, he was persuaded to come to Hagerstown by Gov. William T. Hamilton and Senator Louis E. McComas.

The organ being installed in the municipal auditorium in the Quaker City combines many features unusual in organ construction.

Has Unusual Features.

Hidden away in its mechanism are parts of an automobile, a full-sized upright, piano, an electric door-bell and a full set of traps, not to mention the myriad wooden and metal pipes.

Genuine buckskin was imported from Germany to go into the manufacture of the reed pipes. Experiments showed that using the deer skins for the reed to vibrate upon produced much better tones and did away with the difficulty arising from having dirt collect upon the pipes.

Some of the largest pipes used in this mammoth organ—the wooden ones—are 32 feet in height, or about the size of an average telephone pole. They weigh about 1,000 pounds and the larger metal pipes weigh 300.

Five hundred men worked nine months assembling the instrument which, in the open air, could be heard for a distance of 2½ miles.

California selected white pine was used for its wooden pipes and in all about 25,000 feet of lumber were utilized.

Jurors Not Needed By Federal Court

Pleas, Continuances and Transfers Leave Body With No Work.

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 9.—Petit jurors, called for service in Federal Court for the Northern District of West Virginia here this week, were released today without having been called for a single sitting. The entire criminal and civil dockets, where juries might have been needed, were eliminated either through pleas of guilty, transfer of cases, or continuances.

Twenty-seven indictments were returned by the grand jury Tuesday and Wednesday, most of them involving white slave and liquor violations.

Patrick O'Reilly, Morgantown, pleaded guilty today to possession of liquor and was sentenced to four months in the Monongala County Jail and J. H. Miller, Pittsburgh, pleading guilty to a violation of the stolen vehicle law, was sentenced to ten days in the Harrison County Jail. Prisoners were on their way to Federal institutions at Atlanta, Ga.; Chillicothe, Ohio, and Alderson, W. Va., following imposing of their sentences.

FAIRFAX WILL VOTE ON WATER SYSTEM

Proposal to Issue $125,000 in Bonds to Draw Light Vote.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

A light vote is expected in the special election today at Falls Church, when qualified voters living within the corporate limits of the town will vote on a $125,000 bond issue for installation of a municipally owned water system.

The election is being held in order that the issue may be excluded from the 18 per cent of the town's real property valuation limit, which is fixed by State law.

The election will be held in the council rooms of the town hall, on Washington street. Polls will be open from sunrise to sunset. Judges will be Councilmen Charles E. Gage and J. V. Turner and Town Clerk J. C. Parrott. A majority of those casting their ballots must vote in favor of the bond issue for it to carry.

The court order authorizing the election states that a municipal water system is an undertaking which may earn a revenue and that such indebtedness shall not be included within the otherwise limited indebtedness of the town until after five years after the date of today's election and for so long as such undertaking produces enough revenue to pay the cost of operating the system, interest on bonds and an annual amount to be converted into a sinking fund sufficient to pay all bonds issued on or before their maturity.

Resident free-hold property owners of the town on February 26 voted 36 to 1 in favor of the bond issue, 359 votes being cast in favor of the issue and only 10 against. The plans of the town council in connection with the water system do not call for any increase in local taxes, as the system will be a revenue-producing municipal utility.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Pohick Church will give a chicken supper this evening in Pohick Hall on the Washington Richmond highway. The proceeds of this supper will be used to repair the garage at the rectory. Mrs. C. Lee Starkweather is general chairman in charge of arrangements.

The Woodlawn School and Community League will hold a business meeting this afternoon in the Woodlawn Schoolhouse.

Regular meeting of the Potters Hill School and Community League will be held this evening in the auditorium of the Potters Hill School.

The board of directors of the National Bank of Fairfax will meet this afternoon in the board room of the bank at Fairfax. The new bank building on the corner of Main and Payne streets in Fairfax is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected that the bank will be moved into its new quarters about the first of next month.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy of the Fairfax County Circuit Court, in response to a request of the Fairfax County School Board, has appointed Robert R. Buckley, George B. L. Tuberville, Thomas P. Chapman, sr., E. C. Utterback and James Ernest Harrison as a board of reviewers and appraisers of a tract of land in Centerville district which will be condemned for the building of a schoolhouse near Cub Run.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Southern Methodist Church at Andrew Chapel will meet this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Berry at Andrew Chapel.

The Past Matrons and Past Patrons Association of Northern Virginia will meet this evening at the home of Mrs. Jane Jones at McLean.

Fairfax County Commissioner of Revenue, James U. Kinsepelce, announces that he or his deputy will be at Stalcup's Store in Chesterbrook tomorrow to assist taxpayers of that community in Providence District in making out their State income tax returns and their returns on tangible and intangible personal property.

The Women's Club of the Town of Fals Church will hold a business meeting this afternoon in the town library on Washington street. New officers will be elected. Mrs. Carroll V. Shreve has appointed Mrs. George B. Fadeley, Mrs. Henry Knowles and Mrs. J. S. Higgens as a nominating committee. Mrs. Byron Austin will act as hostess.

The Girls' Auxiliary of the Columbia Baptist Church at Falls Church will meet this evening at the home of Miss Margaret Ankers, in Falls Church.

Miss Sara E. Thomas, Fairfax County home demonstration agent, will attend a business meting of 4-H Clubs at Woodlawn and Potters Hill this morning and at Fort Humphreys and Lorton this afternoon. At each of the meetings the clubs will select the demonstration teams to represent them in the county-wide demonstration next month at Fairfax.

Jury Refuses to Indict Slayer of Wife's Friend

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 9.—A Doddridge County grand jury yesterday at West Union refused to indict Okey Clevenger, 38, oil well driller, for killing Cleveland Gains, 46, gas utility employe, when he caught the latter with Mrs. Clevenger in the Clevenger home there. Gains had his skull crushed with a blow from a rifle barrel.

Both men were married and neighbors. Mrs. Clevenger admitted an intimacy of several years with Gains.

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 9.—Bishop W. W. Dr. David Kirby, of Barboursville, president of Morris Harvey College, was a speaker this afternoon.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

SLIDE, MABEL, SLIDE!

WOMAN'S place may yet be in the pitcher's box. The Chattanooga Club of the Southern League has come forth with a lady twirler. Opinions as to her fast one differ, but she is so good that a rival club has offered two male baseball stars for her, with $2 in cash and a box of cigars thrown in.

• • • •

Even if she is no Matthewson, her box-office value to baseball may run into what baseball men would call heavy dough. The other day she made her appearance against Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. They both struck out in a manner that suggested cooperation in the ballyhoo. But Chattanooga insists the girl is a real pitcher and can stand many a male swatter on his ear.

• • • •

Her name is Jackie Mitchell. Her ambition is to play in a world's series and put down an uprising in Murderers' Row with a change of pace. She has visions of first-page headlines, "Series Opener Won by Southern Girl; Miss Mitchell Holds Sluggers Helpless in Pinches."

• • • •

• • • •

Baseball magnates in the big leagues may belittle the idea of a lady baseball star, but they will continue to watch Miss Mitchell with interest. For they realize how those turnstiles would click if baseball ever did produce a girl who could powder her nose and then fan three sluggers in a row.

• • • •

Once the women folks heard of a sister who could step out there and show up the pompous males they would flock to the ball parks with horns and cowbells.

• • • •

BASEBALL would suddenly discover the Tuesday Women's Cheering Club, the Sisterhood of Diamond Fanatics and the Ladies' Loyal Rooters' Association.

• • • •

The day may not be far distant when John McGraw will have the bleachers set apart for the Mothers' Club and when Col. Ruppert will have to put in extra seats to hold the sporting branch of the D. A. R. and Colonial Dames.

• • • •

You can imagine the following newspaper items:

Northampton, Mass.—Connie Mack arrived here today to look over promising material at Smith College. "My scouts tell me there are several girls here who would be a bulwark of strength to any pennant contender," he said. "I also get reports of a fine shortstop prospect in the junior class at Vassar."

• • • •

New York.—Gloria Mannix, who was signed up by the Giants last season as a utility outfielder, has been farmed out to McGonisheim's department store for further seasoning, it was announced today.

• • • •

Chicago, Ill.—The engagement of Miss Millicent Wimple to Gregory J. Hives was announced here today. Mr. Hives is a paperhanger. Miss Wimple will be remembered as the old third baseman for the Brooklyn Club.

ANNUAL BOYCOTT.

Spring rhubarb's in the market,
As all the world may see.
And right there in the market
It stays, for all of me.

APHASIA.

APHASIA, by the way, suggests as a new simile: As obstreperous as the guest cornetist at a symphony concert.

They say that the Rev. Dr. Holmes is knitting a couple of wound stripes to put on the New York City Hall Park statue of "Civic Virtue."

A jury has been chosen in the Bank of United States case, but possibly it will be referred to as a foreman and eleven affiliates.

1,500 SEEK PRIZES IN NARCISSUS SHOW

Display at Charlottesville From Five States; Many Get Blue Ribbons.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 9.—Fifteen hundred contestants from five States competed for prizes today at Virginia's first narcissus show, held at the Farmington Country Club, under the auspices of the Garden Club of Virginia. It was the second exposition of its type ever held in America.

Nineteen classes were shown, and hundreds of flower lovers marveled at the splendid new creations of the hybridizers of today, who have, by pollen crossing, produced almost a new race of flowers. Maryland and Tennessee growers were well represented at today's show, while one exhibit came by airplane this morning from Tacoma, Wash. Tidewater Virginia predominated numerically in the entrants, but growers from Richmond, Danville, Lynchburg, Winchester, Ashland and Martinsville were also much in evidence.

Mrs. Boggs, Mrs. O'Connor Goolrick and Mrs. Chewning brought a beautiful display from the Colonial Gardens in Fredericksburg. The outstanding commercial exhibit was made by the world's largest raiser of the bulbs, H. K. Vanwaveren, the Holland grower, whose Mathews County bulb farm is widely known.

Numerous ribbons were won by the Roanoke Valley, Danville, Richmond, Martinsville and Rivanna Garden Clubs.

Among those receiving blue ribbons for their exhibits were Miss Elizabeth Hill, of Norfolk; Miss Mary Beirne, of Ashland; Mrs. Joseph G. Walker and Mrs. Leslie Gray, of Orange; Mrs. S. M. Lloyd, Mrs. F. G. Scruggs; Mrs J. O. Watts and Miss Josephine Thornhill, of Lynchburg; Miss Frances Cole and Mrs. Tower, of Richmond; Mrs. C. W. Gooch and Mrs. L. S. Davis.

The blossoms of the daffodil family were judged by John Wister, president of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society; Mrs. Duncan Brent, Baltimore; Mrs. T. H. B. McKnight, of the Garden Club of America, Washington, and Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Belvoir. The show committee was composed of Mrs. Floyd Harris, Aldie; Mrs. W. R. Massie, Greenwood; Mrs. W. Allen Perkins, Charlottesville, and Mrs. Thomas S. Wheelwright, of Buckhead Springs, Chesterfield County.

Former Candidate Held to Be Lunatic

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., April 9.—Barred from the United States House of Representatives and from the Staunton Almshouse, Carney Kelley Rosser, 57, became a ward of Virginia yesterday when a lunacy commission committed him to the Western State Hospital.

After the commission of two doctors and a magistrate announced its decision, Rosser asked permission to visit the Augusta County treasurer's office. There he paid what he termed "My last head tax." A deputy sheriff then escorted him to the asylum.

Rosser told the commission that he was a high school graduate, had attended college two years and also had been enrolled in a law school. Born in North Carolina, he asserted he has a wife and a daughter, but he refused to state where they lived. He said he was married December 20, 1906. Answering affirmatively the question concerning his marital status, Rosser said: "Yes, I am married, but I am not living with my wife; I am a sort of widower."

Rosser qualified as an independent candidate for the House of Representatives from the Tenth Virginia District in the congressional elections last fall, but Henry St. George Tucker, of Lexington, Democratic incumbent, received approximately 30 votes to every 1 cast for Rosser, who was practically unknown outside of Staunton and Augusta.

ARLINGTON COUNTY GAS HELD TOO HIGH

Richmond Starts Hearing on Complaint Against Rosslyn Concern.

Richmond, Va., April 9 (A.P.).—Claims that the present rate of $1.50 per 1,000 cubic feet for domestic consumers of gas in Arlington County is excessive were made today by a witness for the county in its complaint against the Rosslyn Gas Co., of Clarendon, Va.

The hearing, which began today, is expected to continue through the remainder of the week.

I. R. Kephart, chief witness, today offered facts and figures upon which he based an estimate that a $1.18 basic rate would give the company a fair return on its investment.

Excess in 1929.

He also cited figures which, he said, revealed that earnings of the company for 1929 showed an excess of $28,455.16 over the amount allowable for legal return on the investment and that deduction of this amount from the total earnings showed that a rate of $1.20 rather than $1.50 would have given the maximum legal return.

Mr. Kephart testified that if in each instance the gas were made in Washington and distributed by subsidiary companies he knew of no engineering or accounting justification for a higher rate in Arlington County than in suburban areas of Maryland counties, and that if a higher rate than that given in the City of Alexandria was justified in the county the differential should be only a few cents instead of 35 cents, as it is at present.

Denies Personal Knowledge.

On cross-examination the witness admitted that he did not have personal knowledge of whether the areas referred to were supplied with gas from the Washington Gas Light Co. plants and that his statement that the Rosslyn company was a subsidiary of the Washington company was based on knowledge gathered as a resident of Arlington County for a number of years.

Other witnesses heard today were George A. Douglas and Clyde M. Mills. Appearing for the company are Wilton J. Lambert, of Washington, and Frank L. Ball, of Clarendon; W. C. Gloth, of Clarendon; G. C. Bashman, of Aurora Falls, and John C. Gall, of Alexandria, represent the objecting county and citizens.

Responding to prolonged applause as he arose, former Representative R. Walton Moore, who represented the Eighth Congressional District in Congress for many years paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the late Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House of Representatives, who died yesterday. Mr. Moore, referring to the closing days of the last Congress, declared it was Speaker Longworth who, exercising his right as Speaker, suspended the rules and the bill that permitted continued work on the Mount Vernon boulevard passed. Had not Longworth come to the rescue the boulevard might have been delayed, Mr. Moore stated.

In conclusion, he said: "Going back to the days that I was a candidate for the State Senate and later for many terms in the House of Representatives, I shall always remember the loyal support of my friends in Arlington County. Even though the county went in the Republican column for Coolidge, the late President Harding and Hoover, I always carried the county, for which I shall always have the most pleasant memories."

Oliver Owen Kuhn, of Montgomery County, Md., congratulated the federation on the wonderful progress which it has made and urged that it continue to forge ahead as there are today a great many problems which an organization of this character can best solve.

"There never has been a time in the history of this country when strong civic organizations are more needed to solve the many problems separate from politics," he said.

Representative Judge Howard W. Smith also spoke.

The program included solos by Jesse Veitch, who was accompanied by Miss Gladys George, and George Leitch, who was accompanied by Mrs. Ada H. Davidson, and a reading by Mrs. Elsie Gordon.

POLICE ARE AT HALT IN MARINE SLAYING

Since Thorne's Body Was Found in Shallow Grave Theories Fail.

With investigation of both diverging theories of the murder of Marine Private Emanuel Thorne at a standstill Judge Thomas D. Griffith yesterday declared his conviction that the case would go into the files as one of the unsolved mysteries of Prince Georges County.

The investigations conducted by both Lieut. Tom Garrison and Constable Earle Blackwell were interrupted by the hunt for the bandits who held up a bank in Marlboro. All officers were engaged in this, and other matters were put aside.

Blackwell, however, indicated that he would question Vincent Selbicky, on whose property the body was found, further. Selbicky was held in the Marlboro Jail for five days, and then released on Garrison's orders. Thorne's body, partially decomposed, was found in a shallow grave about 100 yards from Selbicky's house in Greater Capitol Heights.

It is Blackwell's theory that Thorne was killed during a fight which took place in the vicinity on March 14. He thinks that it may have been a drunken brawl among a band of automobile thieves.

Garrison believes that there may be a love interest in the case and has been questioning the marine's friends on this angle. He thinks that Thorne was killed about January 16, when he deserted from the Marine Corps.

VIRGINIA U. STAGES MANY EASTER FETES

Dances Are Being Held Each Night in Gymnasium; "Rain" Is Given.

University, Va., April 9 (A.P.).—Easter week festivities are now in full swing at the University of Virginia. Dances are being held each night in Memorial Gymnasium.

The opening dance last night was sponsored by the German Club and the P-K Society. Tonight's affair is under the auspices of the two ribbon societies, T. I. K. K. A. and Eli Banana. Both of these organizations are giving formal figures during the dance.

A successful production of "Rain" has been staged by the Virginia Players in Cabell Hall. The student actors gave this well-known dramatization of Somerset Maugham's play for the first time last night, and it is being repeated tonight.

Miss Roy Land, of Martinsville, Va., has the role of Sadie Thompson, and Eugene Stevens, of Washington, D. C., is playing the part of the Rev. Davidson. The play is being staged by Luther Greene, of the school of dramatic art.

Unusually large crowds have been attending the Easter dances this year. This social season will come to a climax with the closing informal dance Saturday night. That afternoon there will be a baseball game with North Carolina and a track meet with Maryland, and a tennis match with Washington and Lee to make the day interesting from the sports standpoint.

Ministers in Move For Increased Pay

Minimum Is Set at $1,500 Per Year and House Rent Free.

Crisfield, Md., April 9 (A.P.).—Methodist-Episcopal ministers of the Wilmington conference will not be compelled to accept pastorates providing a salary of less than $1,500 a year and a parsonage, as the result of a unanimous vote recorded at the annual session of the conference here.

A motion to this effect was based on recommendations in the report of the district superintendents. The superintendents said that in the year ended March, 1931, there were 63 charges which did not receive a single preparatory member. The majority of the churches in the conference, the report added, have actually declined in membership.

However, it was said that the number of reclamations and conversions this year will approximate 4,000, the largest in a number of years.
